

SOLVED PRACTICE WORKBOOK

Women and Gender Justice - Solved Practice Workbook

UPSC complete learning session | Foundation to advanced | Concepts, evidence, practice and answer writing

Original deterministic study visual; labels are explanatory, not textual quotations.

Source order: repository knowledge -> official current linkage -> clearly marked analysis. No fabricated PYQs or statistics.

CONTENTS / WORKBOOK INDEX

Major learning parts and meaningful subtopics are listed in document order. Page numbers are generated from the final PDF layout; PDF bookmarks mirror the same hierarchy.

Women and Gender Justice - Solved Practice Workbook 6

BASIC MCQS / REMEDIATION 6

Q1. Which statement correctly identifies What this owner holds and the demands routed to it?	6
Q2. Which chronology card should be filed under What this owner holds and the demands routed to it?	7
Q3. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of What this owner holds and the demands routed to it?	8
Q4. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about What this owner holds and the demands routed to it?	8
Q5. Which statement correctly identifies Gender equality, gender equity and women's empowerment as three distinct terms?	9
Q6. Which chronology card should be filed under Gender equality, gender equity and women's empowerment as three distinct terms?	10
Q7. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Gender equality, gender equity and women's empowerment as three distinct terms?	11
Q8. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Gender equality, gender equity and women's empowerment as three distinct terms?	12
Q9. Which statement correctly identifies The constitutional bank behind every gender-justice answer?	12
Q10. Which chronology card should be filed under The constitutional bank behind every gender-justice answer?	13
Q11. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The constitutional bank behind every gender-justice answer?	14
Q12. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The constitutional bank behind every gender-justice answer?	15
Q13. Which statement correctly identifies The domestic-violence statute of 2005 and the character of its reliefs?	16
Q14. Which chronology card should be filed under The domestic-violence statute of 2005 and the character of its reliefs?	16
Q15. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The domestic-violence statute of 2005 and the character of its reliefs?	17
Q16. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The domestic-violence statute of 2005 and the character of its reliefs?	18
Q17. Which statement correctly identifies Protection order and residence order are different reliefs?	19
Q18. Which chronology card should be filed under Protection order and residence order are different reliefs?	19
Q19. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Protection order and residence order are different reliefs?	20
Q20. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Protection order and residence order are different reliefs?	21
Q21. Which statement correctly identifies Who counts as an aggrieved woman and what a domestic relationship covers?	21
Q22. Which chronology card should be filed under Who counts as an aggrieved woman and what a domestic relationship covers?	22
Q23. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Who counts as an aggrieved woman and what a domestic relationship covers?	23

Q24. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Who counts as an aggrieved woman and what a domestic relationship covers?	23
Q25. Which statement correctly identifies The workplace statute of 2013 and the Internal Committee?	24
Q26. Which chronology card should be filed under The workplace statute of 2013 and the Internal Committee?	25
Q27. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The workplace statute of 2013 and the Internal Committee?	26
Q28. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The workplace statute of 2013 and the Internal Committee?	26
Q29. Which statement correctly identifies The Local Committee as the unorganised-sector extension?	27
Q30. Which chronology card should be filed under The Local Committee as the unorganised-sector extension?	28
Q31. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The Local Committee as the unorganised-sector extension?	28
Q32. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The Local Committee as the unorganised-sector extension?	29
Q33. Which statement correctly identifies The umbrella mission and its two tracks?	30
Q34. Which chronology card should be filed under The umbrella mission and its two tracks?	31
Q35. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The umbrella mission and its two tracks?	31
Q36. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The umbrella mission and its two tracks?	32
Q37. Which statement correctly identifies Maternity leave as a labour-law entitlement?	33
Q38. Which chronology card should be filed under Maternity leave as a labour-law entitlement?	34
Q39. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Maternity leave as a labour-law entitlement?	34
Q40. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Maternity leave as a labour-law entitlement?	35
Q41. Which statement correctly identifies The maternity cash transfer and why it is not leave?	36
Q42. Which chronology card should be filed under The maternity cash transfer and why it is not leave?	36
Q43. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The maternity cash transfer and why it is not leave?	37
Q44. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The maternity cash transfer and why it is not leave?	38
Q45. Which statement correctly identifies The women's commission, its statutory powers and its limits?	39
Q46. Which chronology card should be filed under The women's commission, its statutory powers and its limits?	39
Q47. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The women's commission, its statutory powers and its limits?	40
Q48. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The women's commission, its statutory powers and its limits?	41
Q49. Which statement correctly identifies Statutory body against constitutional body and the constitutionalisation demand?	42
Q50. Which chronology card should be filed under Statutory body against constitutional body and the constitutionalisation demand?	42
Q51. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Statutory body against constitutional body and the constitutionalisation demand?	43
Q52. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Statutory body against constitutional body and the constitutionalisation demand?	44

Q53. Which statement correctly identifies Gender budgeting as allocation tracking rather than outcome measurement?	45
Q54. Which chronology card should be filed under Gender budgeting as allocation tracking rather than outcome measurement?	45
Q55. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Gender budgeting as allocation tracking rather than outcome measurement?	46
Q56. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Gender budgeting as allocation tracking rather than outcome measurement?	47
Q57. Which statement correctly identifies Reserved seats, the 106th Amendment and the limit of numerical presence?	47
Q58. Which chronology card should be filed under Reserved seats, the 106th Amendment and the limit of numerical presence?	48
Q59. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Reserved seats, the 106th Amendment and the limit of numerical presence?	49
Q60. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Reserved seats, the 106th Amendment and the limit of numerical presence?	49
Q61. Which statement correctly identifies Judicial doctrine used narrowly?	50
Q62. Which chronology card should be filed under Judicial doctrine used narrowly?	51
Q63. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Judicial doctrine used narrowly?	52
Q64. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Judicial doctrine used narrowly?	52
Q65. Which statement correctly identifies Unpaid care work and the infrastructure that would reduce it?	53
Q66. Which chronology card should be filed under Unpaid care work and the infrastructure that would reduce it?	54
Q67. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Unpaid care work and the infrastructure that would reduce it?	55
Q68. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Unpaid care work and the infrastructure that would reduce it?	55
Q69. Which statement correctly identifies The access baseline of the fifth survey round and the rule against mixing rounds?	56
Q70. Which chronology card should be filed under The access baseline of the fifth survey round and the rule against mixing rounds?	57
Q71. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The access baseline of the fifth survey round and the rule against mixing rounds?	58
Q72. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The access baseline of the fifth survey round and the rule against mixing rounds?	59
Q73. Which statement correctly identifies The child-marriage prevalence anchor and what a prevalence figure proves?	59
Q74. Which chronology card should be filed under The child-marriage prevalence anchor and what a prevalence figure proves?	60
Q75. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The child-marriage prevalence anchor and what a prevalence figure proves?	61
Q76. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The child-marriage prevalence anchor and what a prevalence figure proves?	62
Q77. Which statement correctly identifies The measurement boundary and the honest ownership statement?	62
Q78. Which chronology card should be filed under The measurement boundary and the honest ownership statement?	63

Q79. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The measurement boundary and the honest ownership statement?	64
Q80. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The measurement boundary and the honest ownership statement?	65
PYQS AND ANSWER PRACTICE	66
VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT	66
OWNER PYQ LEDGER EXTRACTS	67
PYQ DEMAND CARD 1 - 2019 General Studies Paper II Question 13	70
PYQ DEMAND CARD 2 - 2020 General Studies Paper II Question 15	71
PYQ DEMAND CARD 3 - 2021 General Studies Paper II Question 2	73
PYQ DEMAND CARD 4 - 2021 General Studies Paper II Question 17	75
PYQ DEMAND CARD 5 - 2023 General Studies Paper II Question 12	76
PYQ DEMAND CARD 6 - 2023 General Studies Paper II Question 14	78
PYQ DEMAND CARD 7 - 2025 General Studies Paper II Question 6	80
ORIGINAL MAINS 1 - 10 MARKS	81
ORIGINAL MAINS 2 - 10 MARKS	83
ORIGINAL MAINS 3 - 15 MARKS	86
ORIGINAL MAINS 4 - 15 MARKS	88
ORIGINAL MAINS 5 - 20 MARKS	90
ORIGINAL MAINS 6 - 20 MARKS	92

Women and Gender Justice - Solved Practice Workbook

BASIC MCQS / REMEDIATION

Q1. Which statement correctly identifies What this owner holds and the demands routed to it?

A. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes.

B. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag.

C. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one.

D. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition.

Answer: A. Explanation: This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q2. Which chronology card should be filed under What this owner holds and the demands routed to it?

A. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. B. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes. C. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one. D. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag.

Answer: B. Explanation: This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q3. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of What this owner holds and the demands routed to it?

A. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. B. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. C. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes. D. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag.

Answer: C. Explanation: This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q4. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about What this owner holds and the demands routed to it?

A. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. B. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. C. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. D. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes.

Answer: D. Explanation: This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q5. Which statement correctly identifies Gender equality, gender equity and women's empowerment as three distinct terms?

A. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. B. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. C. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. D. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q6. Which chronology card should be filed under Gender equality, gender equity and women's empowerment as three distinct terms?

A. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. B. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. C. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. D. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q7. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Gender equality, gender equity and women's empowerment as three distinct terms?

A. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. B. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. C. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. D. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q8. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Gender equality, gender equity and women's empowerment as three distinct terms?

A. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. B. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. C. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false. D. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q9. Which statement correctly identifies The constitutional bank behind every gender-justice answer?

A. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one. B. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. C. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. D. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q10. Which chronology card should be filed under The constitutional bank behind every gender-justice answer?

A. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. B. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one. C. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. D. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(c), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q11. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The constitutional bank behind every gender-justice answer?

A. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. B. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. C. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one. D. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q12. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The constitutional bank behind every gender-justice answer?

A. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false. B. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. C. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. D. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(c) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q13. Which statement correctly identifies The domestic-violence statute of 2005 and the character of its reliefs?

A. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. B. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. C. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. D. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately.

Answer: A. Explanation: The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q14. Which chronology card should be filed under The domestic-violence statute of 2005 and the character of its reliefs?

A. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. B. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. C. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. D. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false.

Answer: B. Explanation: The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q15. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The domestic-violence statute of 2005 and the character of its reliefs?

A. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false. B. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. C. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. D. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately.

Answer: C. Explanation: The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q16. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The domestic-violence statute of 2005 and the character of its reliefs?

A. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. B. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. C. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false. D. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag.

Answer: D. Explanation: The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q17. Which statement correctly identifies Protection order and residence order are different reliefs?

A. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. B. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. C. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false. D. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q18. Which chronology card should be filed under Protection order and residence order are different reliefs?

A. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false. B. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. C. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. D. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q19. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Protection order and residence order are different reliefs?

A. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. B. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false. C. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. D. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q20. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Protection order and residence order are different reliefs?

A. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. B. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. C. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. D. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q21. Which statement correctly identifies Who counts as an aggrieved woman and what a domestic relationship covers?

A. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. B. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. C. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. D. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q22. Which chronology card should be filed under Who counts as an aggrieved woman and what a domestic relationship covers?

A. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false. B. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. C. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. D. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q23. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Who counts as an aggrieved woman and what a domestic relationship covers?

A. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. B. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. C. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. D. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q24. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Who counts as an aggrieved woman and what a domestic relationship covers?

A. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. B. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu

cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. C. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. D. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q25. Which statement correctly identifies The workplace statute of 2013 and the Internal Committee?

A. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. B. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. C. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. D. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false.

Answer: A. Explanation: The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q26. Which chronology card should be filed under The workplace statute of 2013 and the Internal Committee?

A. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. B. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. C. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. D. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme.

Answer: B. Explanation: The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q27. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The workplace statute of 2013 and the Internal Committee?

A. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. B. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. C. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. D. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution.

Answer: C. Explanation: The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q28. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The workplace statute of 2013 and the Internal Committee?

A. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. B. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. C. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. D. The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately.

Answer: D. Explanation: The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q29. Which statement correctly identifies The Local Committee as the unorganised-sector extension?

A. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false. B. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. C. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. D. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme.

Answer: A. Explanation: The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q30. Which chronology card should be filed under The Local Committee as the unorganised-sector extension?

A. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. B. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false. C. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. D. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer.

Answer: B. Explanation: The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q31. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The Local Committee as the unorganised-sector extension?

A. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. B. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. C. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false. D. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution.

Answer: C. Explanation: The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q32. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The Local Committee as the unorganised-sector extension?

A. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. B. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. C. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. D. The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false.

Answer: D. Explanation: The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q33. Which statement correctly identifies The umbrella mission and its two tracks?

A. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. B. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. C. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. D. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered.

Answer: A. Explanation: Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q34. Which chronology card should be filed under The umbrella mission and its two tracks?

A. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. B. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. C. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. D. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer.

Answer: B. Explanation: Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q35. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The umbrella mission and its two tracks?

A. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. B. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. C. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. D. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution.

Answer: C. Explanation: Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q36. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The umbrella mission and its two tracks?

A. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation. B. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. C. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. D. Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme.

Answer: D. Explanation: Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q37. Which statement correctly identifies Maternity leave as a labour-law entitlement?

A. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. B. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. C. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. D. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer.

Answer: A. Explanation: The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q38. Which chronology card should be filed under Maternity leave as a labour-law entitlement?

A. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. B. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. C. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. D. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming.

Answer: B. Explanation: The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q39. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Maternity leave as a labour-law entitlement?

A. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. B. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation. C. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. D. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature.

Answer: C. Explanation: The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q40. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Maternity leave as a labour-law entitlement?

A. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. B. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. C. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation. D. The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered.

Answer: D. Explanation: The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q41. Which statement correctly identifies The maternity cash transfer and why it is not leave?

A. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. B. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. C. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. D. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature.

Answer: A. Explanation: Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q42. Which chronology card should be filed under The maternity cash transfer and why it is not leave?

A. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. B. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. C. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. D. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation.

Answer: B. Explanation: Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q43. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The maternity cash transfer and why it is not leave?

A. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. B. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation. C. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. D. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature.

Answer: C. Explanation: Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q44. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The maternity cash transfer and why it is not leave?

A. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. B. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. C. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation. D. Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer.

Answer: D. Explanation: Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q45. Which statement correctly identifies The women's commission, its statutory powers and its limits?

A. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. B. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation. C. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. D. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming.

Answer: A. Explanation: The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q46. Which chronology card should be filed under The women's commission, its statutory powers and its limits?

A. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. B. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. C. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation. D. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature.

Answer: B. Explanation: The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q47. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The women's commission, its statutory powers and its limits?

A. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. B. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. C. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. D. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation.

Answer: C. Explanation: The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q48. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The women's commission, its statutory powers and its limits?

A. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. B. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. C. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. D. The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution.

Answer: D. Explanation: The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q49. Which statement correctly identifies Statutory body against constitutional body and the constitutionalisation demand?

A. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. B. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. C. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. D. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q50. Which chronology card should be filed under Statutory body against constitutional body and the constitutionalisation demand?

A. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. B. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. C. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. D. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q51. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Statutory body against constitutional body and the constitutionalisation demand?

A. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. B. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. C. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. D. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q52. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Statutory body against constitutional body and the constitutionalisation demand?

A. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. B. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. C. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. D. The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q53. Which statement correctly identifies Gender budgeting as allocation tracking rather than outcome measurement?

A. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. B. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. C. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. D. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation.

Answer: A. Explanation: The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q54. Which chronology card should be filed under Gender budgeting as allocation tracking rather than outcome measurement?

A. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. B. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. C. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. D. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier.

Answer: B. Explanation: The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q55. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Gender budgeting as allocation tracking rather than outcome measurement?

A. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. B. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. C. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. D. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference.

Answer: C. Explanation: The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q56. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Gender budgeting as allocation tracking rather than outcome measurement?

A. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. B. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. C. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. D. The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature.

Answer: D. Explanation: The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q57. Which statement correctly identifies Reserved seats, the 106th Amendment and the limit of numerical presence?

A. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation. B. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. C. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. D. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q58. Which chronology card should be filed under Reserved seats, the 106th Amendment and the limit of numerical presence?

A. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. B. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation. C. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. D. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q59. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Reserved seats, the 106th Amendment and the limit of numerical presence?

A. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. B. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. C. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation. D. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q60. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Reserved seats, the 106th Amendment and the limit of numerical presence?

A. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. B. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes. C. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. D. The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q61. Which statement correctly identifies Judicial doctrine used narrowly?

A. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. B. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. C. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. D. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q62. Which chronology card should be filed under Judicial doctrine used narrowly?

A. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. B. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. C. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. D. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q63. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Judicial doctrine used narrowly?

A. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. B. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. C. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. D. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q64. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Judicial doctrine used narrowly?

A. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. B. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. C. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes. D. The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q65. Which statement correctly identifies Unpaid care work and the infrastructure that would reduce it?

A. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. B. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. C. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. D. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q66. Which chronology card should be filed under Unpaid care work and the infrastructure that would reduce it?

A. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. B. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. C. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. D. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q67. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Unpaid care work and the infrastructure that would reduce it?

A. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. B. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. C. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. D. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q68. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Unpaid care work and the infrastructure that would reduce it?

A. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes. B. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. C. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one. D. The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q69. Which statement correctly identifies The access baseline of the fifth survey round and the rule against mixing rounds?

A. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. B. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes. C. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. D. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q70. Which chronology card should be filed under The access baseline of the fifth survey round and the rule against mixing rounds?

A. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. B. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. C. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. D. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q71. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The access baseline of the fifth survey round and the rule against mixing rounds?

A. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes.

B. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition.

C. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference.

D. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q72. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The access baseline of the fifth survey round and the rule against mixing rounds?

A. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one. B. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. C. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. D. The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q73. Which statement correctly identifies The child-marriage prevalence anchor and what a prevalence figure proves?

A. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. B. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. C. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes. D. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q74. Which chronology card should be filed under The child-marriage prevalence anchor and what a prevalence figure proves?

A. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one. B. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. C. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. D. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q75. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The child-marriage prevalence anchor and what a prevalence figure proves?

A. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. B. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. C. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. D. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q76. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The child-marriage prevalence anchor and what a prevalence figure proves?

A. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. B. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one. C. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. D. The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners record from the sixth round of the National Family Health Survey for 2023-24 that 20.1 per cent of women aged twenty to twenty-four reported marriage before the age of eighteen, down from 23.3 per cent in the fifth round, and they attach the boundary that this is a prevalence indicator and is not proof that every such marriage was detected, reported or prosecuted; the analytical use is that a falling prevalence measured by survey is consistent with weak enforcement measured by case data, so a complete answer joins the survey trend to schooling, safety and household economic security rather than to punishment alone. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q77. Which statement correctly identifies The measurement boundary and the honest ownership statement?

A. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. B. This topic owns the gender half of the rights-and-capability argument, namely protection from domestic violence and from workplace sexual harassment, maternity support, economic empowerment, statutory oversight through the National Commission for Women and allocation tracking through the Gender Budget Statement, and its distinctive feature is the densest verified Mains record in the folder: the audited routing ledgers route seven General Studies Mains demands to it, from 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023 and 2025, together with one objective demand from 2019 whose official key the ledger records as not held locally; the self-help-group social-capital mechanism is owned by the Governance owner, women's workforce-participation macroeconomics by the Economy owner, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on gender equality, gender equity and empowerment is routed by the audited ledger to the Indian Society owner, so this topic argues protection, empowerment and accountability without claiming those routes. C. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one. D. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition.

Answer: A. Explanation: Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q78. Which chronology card should be filed under The measurement boundary and the honest ownership statement?

A. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. B. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. C. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one. D. The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition.

Answer: B. Explanation: Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q79. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The measurement boundary and the honest ownership statement?

A. The owners record the constitutional bank for this topic as Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3), 16, 21, 39(a) to 39(d), 42 and 51A(e), where Article 14 supplies equality before the law, Article 15(1) prohibits discrimination on the ground of sex, Article 15(3) expressly permits the State to make special provision for women and is therefore the enabling clause for differentiated instruments, Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment, Article 21 carries life and personal liberty including protection from violence, the directive principles in Article 39 and Article 42 speak to livelihood, equal pay and just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief, and Article 51A(e) makes renouncing practices derogatory to the dignity of women a fundamental duty; the discipline is that Article 15(3) is an enabling power and not itself a scheme, so a constitutional citation is the start of an argument rather than a substitute for one. B. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. C. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. D. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag.

Answer: C. Explanation: Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q80. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The measurement boundary and the honest ownership statement?

A. The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. B. The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. C. The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. D. Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package.

Answer: D. Explanation: Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

PYQS AND ANSWER PRACTICE

VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT

Seven General Studies Mains demands and one objective demand are routed to this topic in the audited routing ledgers, and each Mains demand is reproduced below as a demand card with its printed year, paper, question number, directive, marks and word limit exactly as the ledgers record them: 2019 General Studies Paper II Question 13, 2020 General Studies Paper II Question 15, 2021 General Studies Paper II Question 2, 2021 General Studies Paper II Question 17, 2023 General Studies Paper II Question 12, 2023 General Studies Paper II Question 14 and 2025 General Studies Paper II Question 6. The ledgers record three of these as cross-cutting routes whose primary subject label is Polity, namely the 2020 constitutionalisation demand, the 2021 higher-judiciary demand and the 2023 constitutional-perspectives demand, and that shared ownership is stated openly rather than claimed exclusively; the 2019 local-self-government demand retains a Panchayati Raj link and the 2023 civil-society demand retains a civil-society link with the Governance owner. One objective demand is also routed, namely 2019 Prelims General Studies Paper I Question 76 on the key provisions of the 2017 maternity-benefit amendment, and the ledger records the official 2018-2023 Prelims keys as not held locally, so no option, key or inferred answer is recorded for it and it is not converted into a solved question. The Basic owner separately discusses the 2024 General Studies Paper I question distinguishing gender equality, gender equity and women's empowerment, but the audited 2024-2025 Mains routing ledger routes that question to the Indian Society owner, so no demand card is manufactured for it here and no ownership is claimed over it. The locally held OCR-searchable official General Studies papers were read only to confirm the printed wording of the routed Mains demands; no question was invented from them and no marking scheme or page precision was imported. Every model solution below is original work written to the repository's examiner-grade standard using the claim, named evidence, analysis and qualification pattern. Each model solution opens with its analytical claim so that the evidence which follows does argumentative rather than decorative work.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on "VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT", every clause, constitutional/statutory/policy distinction, rights-holder and institution map, eligibility/exclusion and delivery chain, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, accountability and qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: The answer must resolve the Social Justice demand in "VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT".

Analytical body:

- 1. Claim and named evidence: Define the vulnerable group, deprivation, right or policy concept and distinguish the nearest legal and measured category. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction.
Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
- 2. Claim and named evidence: Identify the constitutional, statutory, judicial or executive basis and the competent Union, state or local institution. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction.
Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
- 3. Claim and named evidence: Map rights-holder, household/community context, duty-bearer, frontline worker, provider and accountability forum. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction.
Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
- 4. Claim and named evidence: Trace identification, eligibility, documentation, finance, access, portability, grievance, appeal and correction. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction.
Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

5. Claim and named evidence: Use a named Indian law, judgment, scheme, institution or official dataset with source, date, denominator and status. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
6. Claim and named evidence: Test intersectionality, regional variation, stigma, accessibility, privacy, fiscal adequacy, exclusion and causal limits. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

Counter-position / limit: A constitutional promise, prohibition, reservation provision, scheme catalogue, allocation, registration count or headline statistic cannot alone establish accessible implementation, adequate benefit, dignity, remedy or attributable outcome; test eligibility, institutions, frontline capacity, intersectionality, regional variation, grievance and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: The answer must resolve the Social Justice demand in "VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT".

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For 15 marks, spend one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing right/need -> institution -> eligibility -> delivery -> outcome -> remedy; state a thesis; write four to seven claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification points; reserve the final minute for dignity, accessibility, portability, grievance, denominator, fiscal and causal limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains mechanisms rather than listing schemes, uses named India-centric evidence and preserves legal, institutional, group, eligibility, implementation, fiscal, data and outcome distinctions.

How to improve this answer: For "VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT", replace the weakest scheme-catalogue point with one named rights-holder, duty-bearer, eligibility bottleneck, safeguard, grievance route, process/outcome indicator and source-status qualification.

OWNER PYQ LEDGER EXTRACTS

9. PYQ application

- FACT: 2024 GS-I (10 marks): structure the answer as a three-term definitional distinction (equality/equity/empowerment), then pivot to programme-design implications: targeting women's time poverty, enabling mobility, providing childcare, designing gender- sensitive M&E indicators.
- FACT: 2025 GS-II Q6 (10 marks): cross-link to Governance/basic/04 for the social-capital theory; in the gender-justice context, connect SHG-based empowerment to Mission Shakti's Samarthya sub-scheme and the broader economic-access component of gender equity.

Recent PYQ Integration (2024-2025)

Status: 2024-2025 question-level PYQ demand is integrated into this owner. Provenance: Audited local official-paper routing ledgers: _PYQ-ROUTING-MAINS-GS1-GS2-ESSAY-2024-2025.md.

- Years represented: 2025
- Paper(s): GS-II
- Routed question demands: 1

Year	Paper	Q	PYQ demand (neutral rendering)	Directive / format	Source status	Owner requirement
2025	GS-II	6	Women's social capital, empowerment and gender equity	Explain · 10 marks · 150 words	Routed to owning topic	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.

What this owner must now support

- Women's social capital, empowerment and gender equity

This block integrates the 2024-2025 examinable demand and paper metadata. It is kept separate from the 2018-2023 block and does not convert an unkeyed/answer-free objective question into a solved answer.

Historical PYQ Integration (2018-2023)

Status: Question-level PYQ demand is integrated into this owner. Provenance: Audited local official-paper routing ledgers: _PYQ-ROUTING-MAINS-GS1-GS2-ESSAY-2018-2023.md, _PYQ-ROUTING-PRELIMS-2018-2023.md. Answer-key rule: The official 2018-2023 Prelims/CSAT keys are not held locally; no option or answer has been inferred.

- Years represented: 2019, 2020, 2021, 2023
- Paper(s): GS-II, Prelims GS-I
- Routed question demands: 7

Year	Paper	Q	PYQ demand (neutral rendering)	Directive / format	Source status	Owner requirement
2019	GS-II	13	Reservation of seats for women in local self-government and patriarchy	Comment · 15 marks · 250 words	Social Justice Core route; cross-cutting local-government link retained	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.
2019	Prelims GS-I	76	Maternity Benefit Amendment Act 2017 key provisions	Objective question; official key unavailable locally	Routed; key unavailable locally	Cover the named fact/concept and its likely statement-level distinctions.
2020	GS-II	15	Constitutionalization of the National Commission for Women	Which steps and give reasons · 15 marks · 250 words	Cross-cutting; commission design, gender justice and consolidated body-design Core	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.
2021	GS-II	2	Greater representation of women in the higher judiciary	Discuss the desirability · 10 marks · 150 words	Social Justice Core route; judicial appointments link retained	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.
2021	GS-II	17	Patriarchal social attitudes and interventions beyond education and schemes	What interventions can help · 15 marks · 250 words	Core route supersedes older Advanced ownership	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.
2023	GS-II	12	Constitutional perspectives of gender justice with provisions and case law	Explain · 15 marks · 250 words	Social Justice Core route; constitutional-doctrine link retained	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.
2023	GS-II	14	Civil society groups and women's representation in state legislatures	Discuss the contribution · 15 marks · 250 words	Social Justice Core route; civil-society link retained	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.

What this owner must now support

- Reservation of seats for women in local self-government and patriarchy
- Maternity Benefit Amendment Act 2017 key provisions
- Constitutionalization of the National Commission for Women

- Greater representation of women in the higher judiciary
- Patriarchal social attitudes and interventions beyond education and schemes
- Constitutional perspectives of gender justice with provisions and case law
- Civil society groups and women's representation in state legislatures

The table integrates the examinable demand and paper metadata. It does not turn an unkeyed objective question into a solved answer, and it does not claim that lexical presence alone proves full conceptual sufficiency.

10. PYQ-based analytical application

- FACT: 2024 GS-I (10 marks): the answer must define all three terms (equality/equity/empowerment), then argue that programme design requires: (a) gender-disaggregated data to identify structural barriers; (b) differentiated instruments (childcare, mobility support) to offset those barriers; (c) outcome M&E (not just coverage) to verify empowerment is achieved.
- FACT: 2025 GS-II Q6 (10 marks): cross-link to Governance/04; in the gender-justice context, note that SHG-based social capital is one mechanism among several (protective law, maternity support, gender budgeting) - the PYQ tests the SHG-specific pathway, not the full protection-empowerment architecture.

Historical PYQ Integration (2018-2023)

Status: Question-level PYQ demand is integrated into this owner. Provenance: Audited local official-paper routing ledgers: _PYQ-ROUTING-MAINS-GS1-GS2-ESSAY-2018-2023.md.

- Years represented: 2019, 2021, 2023
- Paper(s): GS-II
- Routed question demands: 5

Year	Paper	Q	PYQ demand (neutral rendering)	Directive / format	Source status	Owner requirement
2019	GS-II	13	Reservation of seats for women in local self-government and patriarchy	Comment · 15 marks · 250 words	Cross-cutting; gender justice and local government both linked	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.
2021	GS-II	2	Greater representation of women in the higher judiciary	Discuss the desirability · 10 marks · 150 words	Cross-cutting; judicial appointments and gender justice both linked	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.
2021	GS-II	17	Patriarchal social attitudes and interventions beyond education and schemes	What interventions can help · 15 marks · 250 words	Routed to owning topic	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.
2023	GS-II	12	Constitutional perspectives of gender justice with provisions and case law	Explain · 15 marks · 250 words	Cross-cutting; gender justice and constitutional guarantees both linked	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.
2023	GS-II	14	Civil society groups and women's representation in state legislatures	Discuss the contribution · 15 marks · 250 words	Cross-cutting; gender representation and civil society both named in the stem	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.

What this owner must now support

- Reservation of seats for women in local self-government and patriarchy

- Greater representation of women in the higher judiciary
- Patriarchal social attitudes and interventions beyond education and schemes
- Constitutional perspectives of gender justice with provisions and case law
- Civil society groups and women's representation in state legislatures

The table integrates the examinable demand and paper metadata. It does not turn an unkeyed objective question into a solved answer, and it does not claim that lexical presence alone proves full conceptual sufficiency.

PYQ DEMAND CARD 1 - 2019 General Studies Paper II Question 13

Demand: The reservation of seats for women in the institutions of local self-government has had a limited impact on the patriarchal character of the Indian political process, asked with the instruction to comment, 15 marks, 250 words, exactly as recorded in the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger and as printed in the locally held official paper.

Status: Routed to this owner in the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger as the Social Justice Core route, with a cross-cutting local-government link retained to the Panchayati Raj owner. No official answer key exists for a Mains demand and none is claimed.

Model solution: Claim: the reservation changed who occupies a seat far more completely than it changed who exercises power, so the comment should be a qualified agreement rather than either denial or endorsement. Named evidence and example: Articles 243D and 243T reserving seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, recorded by the owners as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement; the 106th Amendment extending a one-third reservation to the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies but operating only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the owners' recorded limit that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women; and the Time Use Survey evidence that unpaid care time constrains the hours a representative can actually give to office. Analysis: reservation is a supply-side instrument that guarantees entry, whereas patriarchy operates on the demand side of politics through candidate selection, agenda control and household time, so a guaranteed seat can coexist with a relative signing the file, which is exactly the limited impact the statement describes; the honest counterpoint is that entry is a precondition for everything else and that a generation of women representatives changes what is thinkable even where it does not yet change who decides. Qualification: no participation, attendance or proxy-incidence figure is asserted, because the owners carry no such count, and the legislative reservation is described as sequenced rather than as operational. Why this earns marks: it comments by conceding the claim at the level of power while contesting it at the level of entry, and it grounds both halves in named provisions and a recorded structural constraint.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on "PYQ DEMAND CARD 1 - 2019 General Studies Paper II Question 13", every clause, constitutional/statutory/policy distinction, rights-holder and institution map, eligibility/exclusion and delivery chain, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, accountability and qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Claim: the reservation changed who occupies a seat far more completely than it changed who exercises power, so the comment should be a qualified agreement rather than either denial or endorsement. Named evidence and example: Articles 243D and 243T reserving seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, recorded by the owners as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement; the 106th Amendment extending a one-third reservation to the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies but operating only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the owners' recorded limit that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women; and the Time Use Survey evidence that unpaid care time constrains the hours a representative can actually give to office. Analysis: reservation is a supply-side instrument that guarantees entry, whereas patriarchy operates on the demand side of politics through candidate selection, agenda control and household time, so a guaranteed seat can coexist with a relative signing the file, which is exactly the limited impact the statement describes; the honest counterpoint is that entry is a precondition for everything else and that a generation of women representatives changes what is thinkable even where it does not yet change who decides. Qualification: no participation, attendance or proxy-incidence figure is asserted, because the owners carry no such count, and the legislative reservation is described as sequenced rather than as operational. Why this earns marks: it comments by conceding the claim at the level of power while contesting it at the level of entry, and it grounds both halves in named provisions and a recorded structural constraint.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: PYQ DEMAND CARD 1 - 2019 General Studies Paper II Question 13 Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

Counter-position / limit: A constitutional promise, prohibition, reservation provision, scheme catalogue, allocation, registration count or headline statistic cannot alone establish accessible implementation, adequate benefit, dignity, remedy or attributable outcome; test eligibility, institutions, frontline capacity, intersectionality, regional variation, grievance and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Claim: the reservation changed who occupies a seat far more completely than it changed who exercises power, so the comment should be a qualified agreement rather than either denial or endorsement. Named evidence and example: Articles 243D and 243T reserving seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, recorded by the owners as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement; the 106th Amendment extending a one-third reservation to the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies but operating only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the owners' recorded limit that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women; and the Time Use Survey evidence that unpaid care time constrains the hours a representative can actually give to office. Analysis: reservation is a supply-side instrument that guarantees entry, whereas patriarchy operates on the demand side of politics through candidate selection, agenda control and household time, so a guaranteed seat can coexist with a relative signing the file, which is exactly the limited impact the statement describes; the honest counterpoint is that entry is a precondition for everything else and that a generation of women representatives changes what is thinkable even where it does not yet change who decides. Qualification: no participation, attendance or proxy-incidence figure is asserted, because the owners carry no such count, and the legislative reservation is described as sequenced rather than as operational. Why this earns marks: it comments by conceding the claim at the level of power while contesting it at the level of entry, and it grounds both halves in named provisions and a recorded structural constraint.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For 15 marks, spend one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing right/need -> institution -> eligibility -> delivery -> outcome -> remedy; state a thesis; write four to seven claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification points; reserve the final minute for dignity, accessibility, portability, grievance, denominator, fiscal and causal limits.

How to improve this answer: For "PYQ DEMAND CARD 1 - 2019 General Studies Paper II Question 13", replace the weakest scheme-catalogue point with one named rights-holder, duty-bearer, eligibility bottleneck, safeguard, grievance route, process/outcome indicator and source-status qualification.

PYQ DEMAND CARD 2 - 2020 General Studies Paper II Question 15

Demand: Which steps are required for constitutionalization of a Commission, and whether imparting constitutionality to the National Commission for Women would ensure greater gender justice and empowerment in India, asked with the instruction to give reasons, 15 marks, 250 words, exactly as recorded in the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger and as printed in the locally held official paper.

Status: Routed as a cross-cutting demand in the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger, whose primary subject label is Polity and whose routing names the commission-design owner alongside this gender-justice owner, so shared ownership is stated rather than claimed exclusively. No official answer key exists for a Mains demand and none is claimed.

Model solution: Claim: constitutionalisation would entrench the Commission and raise the cost of weakening it, but it would not by itself supply the enforcement power whose absence is the recorded limitation, so the reasoned answer is a conditional yes. Named evidence and example: the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 as the ordinary statute that creates the Commission with a Chairperson and Members as notified; its recorded powers to investigate complaints of deprivation of rights, take suo motu cognisance, review legislation, advise on policy and inspect jails and remand homes; the recorded limitation that it recommends and cannot make an order that binds like a court; and the comparator design of the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A, which are constitutional bodies whose duties to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report are entrenched. Analysis: the steps required are a constitutional amendment inserting an article that states the Commission's existence, composition, appointment route and duties, together with a consequential duty on governments to consult it on major policy affecting women and to lay its reports, because that is the pattern the Scheduled Caste and Scheduled Tribe articles follow; entrenchment therefore protects the institution from an ordinary amending majority and gives its reports a constitutional audience, but a body that recommends will still depend on executive follow-up and on investigative capacity, so gender justice improves only if entrenchment is accompanied by staffing, coordination with State commissions and a duty to act on findings. Qualification: no budget, staffing, complaint or disposal figure is asserted, and the answer does not claim that the Scheduled Caste or Scheduled Tribe commissions possess enforcement powers that the record does not show. Why this earns marks: it answers both halves of a two-part demand, gives a concrete amendment design drawn from an existing constitutional model, and closes with a reasoned condition instead of an unqualified endorsement.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on "PYQ DEMAND CARD 2 - 2020 General Studies Paper II Question 15", every clause, constitutional/statutory/policy distinction, rights-holder and institution map, eligibility/exclusion and delivery chain, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, accountability and qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Claim: constitutionalisation would entrench the Commission and raise the cost of weakening it, but it would not by itself supply the enforcement power whose absence is the recorded limitation, so the reasoned answer is a conditional yes. Named evidence and example: the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 as the ordinary statute that creates the Commission with a Chairperson and Members as notified; its recorded powers to investigate complaints of deprivation of rights, take suo motu cognisance, review legislation, advise on policy and inspect jails and remand homes; the recorded limitation that it recommends and cannot make an order that binds like a court; and the comparator design of the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A, which are constitutional bodies whose duties to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report are entrenched. Analysis: the steps required are a constitutional amendment inserting an article that states the Commission's existence, composition, appointment route and duties, together with a consequential duty on governments to consult it on major policy affecting women and to lay its reports, because that is the pattern the Scheduled Caste and Scheduled Tribe articles follow; entrenchment therefore protects the institution from an ordinary amending majority and gives its reports a constitutional audience, but a body that recommends will still depend on executive follow-up and on investigative capacity, so gender justice improves only if entrenchment is accompanied by staffing, coordination with State commissions and a duty to act on findings. Qualification: no budget, staffing, complaint or disposal figure is asserted, and the answer does not claim that the Scheduled Caste or Scheduled Tribe commissions possess enforcement powers that the record does not show. Why this earns marks: it answers both halves of a two-part demand, gives a concrete amendment design drawn from an existing constitutional model, and closes with a reasoned condition instead of an unqualified endorsement.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: PYQ DEMAND CARD 2 - 2020 General Studies Paper II Question 15 Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

Counter-position / limit: A constitutional promise, prohibition, reservation provision, scheme catalogue, allocation, registration count or headline statistic cannot alone establish accessible implementation, adequate benefit, dignity, remedy or attributable outcome; test eligibility, institutions, frontline capacity, intersectionality, regional variation, grievance and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Claim: constitutionalisation would entrench the Commission and raise the cost of weakening it, but it would not by itself supply the enforcement power whose absence is the recorded limitation, so the reasoned answer is a conditional yes. Named evidence and example: the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 as the ordinary statute that creates the Commission with a Chairperson and Members as notified; its recorded powers to investigate complaints of deprivation of rights, take suo motu cognisance, review legislation, advise on policy and inspect jails and remand homes; the recorded limitation that it recommends and cannot make an order that binds like a court; and the comparator design of the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A, which are constitutional bodies whose duties to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report are entrenched. Analysis: the steps required are a constitutional amendment inserting an article that states the Commission's existence, composition, appointment route and duties, together with a consequential duty on governments to consult it on major policy affecting women and to lay its reports, because that is the pattern the Scheduled Caste and Scheduled Tribe articles follow; entrenchment therefore protects the institution from an ordinary amending majority and gives its reports a constitutional audience, but a body that recommends will still depend on executive follow-up and on investigative capacity, so gender justice improves only if entrenchment is accompanied by staffing, coordination with State commissions and a duty to act on findings. Qualification: no budget, staffing, complaint or disposal figure is asserted, and the answer does not claim that the Scheduled Caste or Scheduled Tribe commissions possess enforcement powers that the record does not show. Why this earns marks: it answers both halves of a two-part demand, gives a concrete amendment design drawn from an existing constitutional model, and closes with a reasoned condition instead of an unqualified endorsement.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For 15 marks, spend one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing right/need -> institution -> eligibility -> delivery -> outcome -> remedy; state a thesis; write four to seven claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification points; reserve the final minute for dignity, accessibility, portability, grievance, denominator, fiscal and causal limits.

How to improve this answer: For "PYQ DEMAND CARD 2 - 2020 General Studies Paper II Question 15", replace the weakest scheme-catalogue point with one named rights-holder, duty-bearer, eligibility bottleneck, safeguard, grievance route, process/outcome indicator and source-status qualification.

PYQ DEMAND CARD 3 - 2021 General Studies Paper II Question 2

Demand: The desirability of greater representation to women in the higher judiciary to ensure diversity, equity and inclusiveness, asked with the instruction to discuss, 10 marks, 150 words, exactly as recorded in the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger and as printed in the locally held official paper.

Status: Routed as a cross-cutting demand in the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger, where the Social Justice Core route is recorded alongside a retained judicial-appointments link owned by the Polity owner. No official answer key exists for a Mains demand and none is claimed.

Model solution: Claim: greater representation of women in the higher judiciary is desirable on all three stated grounds, but the case must be made from adjudication and legitimacy rather than from symbolism alone. Named evidence and example: the constitutional bank of Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3) and 16, where Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment and Article 15(3) permits special provision for women; the narrow holdings that shaped women's constitutional status, namely Vishaka linking equality and dignity to workplace protection, Shayara Bano scrutinising a discriminatory personal-law practice and Joseph Shine rejecting a paternalistic adultery offence; and the recorded structural constraints of time poverty, mobility and care burden which shape the pipeline from litigation practice to elevation. Analysis: diversity matters to adjudication because the questions before constitutional courts include workplace harassment, domestic violence, personal law and reproductive autonomy, where lived perspective affects which facts are treated as material; equity matters because the appointment pipeline is not neutral when entry into litigation practice is shaped by the same care and safety constraints the courts adjudicate; and inclusiveness matters because a court's legitimacy rests partly on whether those subject to it can recognise themselves within it. Qualification: no figure on the number or share of women judges is asserted, because the owners carry none, and representation is argued as a condition of legitimacy rather than as a guarantee of any particular outcome. Why this earns marks: it discusses each of the three named grounds separately, supports them with provisions and narrow holdings, and refuses to substitute an invented statistic for an argument.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on "PYQ DEMAND CARD 3 - 2021 General Studies Paper II Question 2", every clause, constitutional/statutory/policy distinction, rights-holder and institution map, eligibility/exclusion and delivery chain, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, accountability and qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Claim: greater representation of women in the higher judiciary is desirable on all three stated grounds, but the case must be made from adjudication and legitimacy rather than from symbolism alone. Named evidence and example: the constitutional bank of Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3) and 16, where Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment and Article 15(3) permits special provision for women; the narrow holdings that shaped women's constitutional status, namely Vishaka linking equality and dignity to workplace protection, Shayara Bano scrutinising a discriminatory personal-law practice and Joseph Shine rejecting a paternalistic adultery offence; and the recorded structural constraints of time poverty, mobility and care burden which shape the pipeline from litigation practice to elevation. Analysis: diversity matters to adjudication because the questions before constitutional courts include workplace harassment, domestic violence, personal law and reproductive autonomy, where lived perspective affects which facts are treated as material; equity matters because the appointment pipeline is not neutral when entry into litigation practice is shaped by the same care and safety constraints the courts adjudicate; and inclusiveness matters because a court's legitimacy rests partly on whether those subject to it can recognise themselves within it. Qualification: no figure on the number or share of women judges is asserted, because the owners carry none, and representation is argued as a condition of legitimacy rather than as a guarantee of any particular outcome. Why this earns marks: it discusses each of the three named grounds separately, supports them with provisions and narrow holdings, and refuses to substitute an invented statistic for an argument.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: PYQ DEMAND CARD 3 - 2021 General Studies Paper II Question 2 Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

Counter-position / limit: A constitutional promise, prohibition, reservation provision, scheme catalogue, allocation, registration count or headline statistic cannot alone establish accessible implementation, adequate benefit, dignity, remedy or attributable outcome; test eligibility, institutions, frontline capacity, intersectionality, regional variation, grievance and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Claim: greater representation of women in the higher judiciary is desirable on all three stated grounds, but the case must be made from adjudication and legitimacy rather than from symbolism alone. Named evidence and example: the constitutional bank of Articles 14, 15(1), 15(3) and 16, where Article 16 governs equality of opportunity in public employment and Article 15(3) permits special provision for women; the narrow holdings that shaped women's constitutional status, namely Vishaka linking equality and dignity to workplace protection, Shayara Bano scrutinising a discriminatory personal-law practice and Joseph Shine rejecting a paternalistic adultery offence; and the recorded structural constraints of time poverty, mobility and care burden which shape the pipeline from litigation practice to elevation. Analysis: diversity matters to adjudication because the questions before constitutional courts include workplace harassment, domestic violence, personal law and reproductive autonomy, where lived perspective affects which facts are treated as material; equity matters because the appointment pipeline is not neutral when entry into litigation practice is shaped by the same care and safety constraints the courts adjudicate; and inclusiveness matters because a court's legitimacy rests partly on whether those subject to it can recognise themselves within it. Qualification: no figure on the number or share of women judges is asserted, because the owners carry none, and representation is argued as a condition of legitimacy rather than as a guarantee of any particular outcome. Why this earns marks: it discusses each of the three named grounds separately, supports them with provisions and narrow holdings, and refuses to substitute an invented statistic for an argument.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For 15 marks, spend one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing right/need -> institution -> eligibility -> delivery -> outcome -> remedy; state a thesis; write four to seven claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification points; reserve the final minute for dignity, accessibility, portability, grievance, denominator, fiscal and causal limits.

How to improve this answer: For "PYQ DEMAND CARD 3 - 2021 General Studies Paper II Question 2", replace the weakest scheme-catalogue point with one named rights-holder, duty-bearer, eligibility bottleneck, safeguard, grievance route, process/outcome indicator and source-status qualification.

PYQ DEMAND CARD 4 - 2021 General Studies Paper II Question 17

Demand: Though women in post-Independent India have excelled in various fields, the social attitude towards women and the feminist movement has been patriarchal, asked with the instruction to state what interventions can help change this milieu apart from women's education and women's empowerment schemes, 15 marks, 250 words, exactly as recorded in the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger and as printed in the locally held official paper.

Status: Routed to this owner in the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger, where the Core route is recorded as superseding the older Advanced ownership. No official answer key exists for a Mains demand and none is claimed.

Model solution: Claim: the question expressly excludes education and empowerment schemes, so the marks lie in interventions that change time, safety, law and representation rather than awareness. Named evidence and example: the Time Use Survey evidence that makes cooking, cleaning and care visible as work, and the owners' classification of childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure; the protective statutes that alter the price of coercion, namely the Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 with its protection and residence orders and the Section 31 offence for breach, and the Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace Act, 2013 with its Internal Committee at ten or more employees and its district Local Committee for smaller and unorganised workplaces; the maternity split between the twenty-six-week employer obligation and the conditional transfer, which decides whether childbirth ends a career; and the representation instruments in Articles 243D and 243T and the sequenced 106th Amendment reservation. Analysis: patriarchy is reproduced by three material mechanisms rather than by opinion alone, namely the unpaid allocation of household time, the low cost of male coercion, and the exclusion of women from the rooms where selection and agenda-setting happen; so the interventions that follow are care and mobility infrastructure that returns time, enforcement capacity that raises the cost of coercion by staffing Protection Officers and constituting compliant committees, and representation that changes selection, each of which operates without depending on a change of attitude first. Qualification: attitudinal change is not dismissed but sequenced, and no figure on care time, case disposal or representation is asserted because the owners carry none. Why this earns marks: it obeys the exclusion in the stem, converts a cultural claim into three material mechanisms and attaches a named instrument to each.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on "PYQ DEMAND CARD 4 - 2021 General Studies Paper II Question 17", every clause, constitutional/statutory/policy distinction, rights-holder and institution map, eligibility/exclusion and delivery chain, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, accountability and qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Claim: the question expressly excludes education and empowerment schemes, so the marks lie in interventions that change time, safety, law and representation rather than awareness. Named evidence and example: the Time Use Survey evidence that makes cooking, cleaning and care visible as work, and the owners' classification of childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure; the protective statutes that alter the price of coercion, namely the Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 with its protection and residence orders and the Section 31 offence for breach, and the Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace Act, 2013 with its Internal Committee at ten or more employees and its district Local Committee for smaller and unorganised workplaces; the maternity split between the twenty-six-week employer obligation and the conditional transfer, which decides whether childbirth ends a career; and the representation instruments in Articles 243D and 243T and the sequenced 106th Amendment reservation. Analysis: patriarchy is reproduced by three material mechanisms rather than by opinion alone, namely the unpaid allocation of household time, the low cost of male coercion, and the exclusion of women from the rooms where selection and agenda-setting happen; so the interventions that follow are care and mobility infrastructure that returns time, enforcement capacity that raises the cost of coercion by staffing Protection Officers and constituting compliant committees, and representation that changes selection, each of which operates without depending on a change of attitude first. Qualification: attitudinal change is not dismissed but sequenced, and no figure on care time, case disposal or representation is asserted because the owners carry none. Why this earns marks: it obeys the exclusion in the stem, converts a cultural claim into three material mechanisms and attaches a named instrument to each.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: PYQ DEMAND CARD 4 - 2021 General Studies Paper II Question 17 Analysis:
Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

Counter-position / limit: A constitutional promise, prohibition, reservation provision, scheme catalogue, allocation, registration count or headline statistic cannot alone establish accessible implementation, adequate benefit, dignity, remedy or attributable outcome; test eligibility, institutions, frontline capacity, intersectionality, regional variation, grievance and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Claim: the question expressly excludes education and empowerment schemes, so the marks lie in interventions that change time, safety, law and representation rather than awareness. Named evidence and example: the Time Use Survey evidence that makes cooking, cleaning and care visible as work, and the owners' classification of childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure; the protective statutes that alter the price of coercion, namely the Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 with its protection and residence orders and the Section 31 offence for breach, and the Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace Act, 2013 with its Internal Committee at ten or more employees and its district Local Committee for smaller and unorganised workplaces; the maternity split between the twenty-six-week employer obligation and the conditional transfer, which decides whether childbirth ends a career; and the representation instruments in Articles 243D and 243T and the sequenced 106th Amendment reservation. Analysis: patriarchy is reproduced by three material mechanisms rather than by opinion alone, namely the unpaid allocation of household time, the low cost of male coercion, and the exclusion of women from the rooms where selection and agenda-setting happen; so the interventions that follow are care and mobility infrastructure that returns time, enforcement capacity that raises the cost of coercion by staffing Protection Officers and constituting compliant committees, and representation that changes selection, each of which operates without depending on a change of attitude first. Qualification: attitudinal change is not dismissed but sequenced, and no figure on care time, case disposal or representation is asserted because the owners carry none. Why this earns marks: it obeys the exclusion in the stem, converts a cultural claim into three material mechanisms and attaches a named instrument to each.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For 15 marks, spend one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing right/need -> institution -> eligibility -> delivery -> outcome -> remedy; state a thesis; write four to seven claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification points; reserve the final minute for dignity, accessibility, portability, grievance, denominator, fiscal and causal limits.

How to improve this answer: For "PYQ DEMAND CARD 4 - 2021 General Studies Paper II Question 17", replace the weakest scheme-catalogue point with one named rights-holder, duty-bearer, eligibility bottleneck, safeguard, grievance route, process/outcome indicator and source-status qualification.

PYQ DEMAND CARD 5 - 2023 General Studies Paper II Question 12

Demand: The constitutional perspectives of gender justice explained with the help of relevant constitutional provisions and case laws, asked with the instruction to explain, 15 marks, 250 words, exactly as recorded in the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger and as printed in the locally held official paper.

Status: Routed as a cross-cutting demand in the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger, where the Social Justice Core route is recorded alongside a retained constitutional-doctrine link owned by the Fundamental Rights owner. No official answer key exists for a Mains demand and none is claimed.

Model solution: Claim: the constitutional perspective on gender justice is not a single guarantee but a movement from formal equality to enabled difference and then to dignity and autonomy, and the provisions and holdings map onto exactly that movement. Named evidence and example: Article 14 for equality before the law, Article 15(1) for the prohibition of discrimination on the ground of sex and Article 15(3) for the express power to make special provision for women; Article 16 for equality of opportunity in public employment; Article 21 for life and personal liberty including protection from violence; the directive principles in Article 39 clauses (a) to (d) and Article 42 on just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief; the fundamental duty in Article 51A(e) to renounce practices derogatory to the dignity of women; and the case bank used narrowly, namely Vishaka linking equality and dignity to workplace protection, Shayara Bano scrutinising a discriminatory personal-law practice and Joseph Shine rejecting a paternalistic adultery offence. Analysis: Articles 14, 15(1) and 16 establish that sex is not a permissible ground of differentiation, Article 15(3) then rescues differentiation that repairs disadvantage, which is why maternity relief and reserved seats are not exceptions to equality but instruments of it, and Article 21 read with the holdings converts the guarantee from non-discrimination into positive protection of safety, dignity and autonomy; the directive principles and the fundamental duty supply the non-justiciable frame that legislatures and citizens are asked to honour. Qualification: each holding is used narrowly for the proposition it decided, the directive principles are identified as non-justiciable, and no case is cited for a proposition wider than the owners record. Why this earns marks: it explains a perspective as a structure rather than as a list, and every step is carried by a named provision or a precisely bounded holding.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on "PYQ DEMAND CARD 5 - 2023 General Studies Paper II Question 12", every clause, constitutional/statutory/policy distinction, rights-holder and institution map, eligibility/exclusion and delivery chain, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, accountability and qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Claim: the constitutional perspective on gender justice is not a single guarantee but a movement from formal equality to enabled difference and then to dignity and autonomy, and the provisions and holdings map onto exactly that movement. Named evidence and example: Article 14 for equality before the law, Article 15(1) for the prohibition of discrimination on the ground of sex and Article 15(3) for the express power to make special provision for women; Article 16 for equality of opportunity in public employment; Article 21 for life and personal liberty including protection from violence; the directive principles in Article 39 clauses (a) to (d) and Article 42 on just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief; the fundamental duty in Article 51A(e) to renounce practices derogatory to the dignity of women; and the case bank used narrowly, namely Vishaka linking equality and dignity to workplace protection, Shayara Bano scrutinising a discriminatory personal-law practice and Joseph Shine rejecting a paternalistic adultery offence. Analysis: Articles 14, 15(1) and 16 establish that sex is not a permissible ground of differentiation, Article 15(3) then rescues differentiation that repairs disadvantage, which is why maternity relief and reserved seats are not exceptions to equality but instruments of it, and Article 21 read with the holdings converts the guarantee from non-discrimination into positive protection of safety, dignity and autonomy; the directive principles and the fundamental duty supply the non-justiciable frame that legislatures and citizens are asked to honour. Qualification: each holding is used narrowly for the proposition it decided, the directive principles are identified as non-justiciable, and no case is cited for a proposition wider than the owners record. Why this earns marks: it explains a perspective as a structure rather than as a list, and every step is carried by a named provision or a precisely bounded holding.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: PYQ DEMAND CARD 5 - 2023 General Studies Paper II Question 12 Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

Counter-position / limit: A constitutional promise, prohibition, reservation provision, scheme catalogue, allocation, registration count or headline statistic cannot alone establish accessible implementation, adequate benefit, dignity, remedy or attributable outcome; test eligibility, institutions, frontline capacity, intersectionality, regional variation, grievance and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Claim: the constitutional perspective on gender justice is not a single guarantee but a movement from formal equality to enabled difference and then to dignity and autonomy, and the provisions and holdings map onto exactly that movement. Named evidence and example: Article 14 for equality before the law, Article 15(1) for the prohibition of discrimination on the ground of sex and Article 15(3) for the express power to make special provision for women; Article 16 for equality of opportunity in public employment; Article 21 for life and personal liberty including protection from violence; the directive principles in Article 39 clauses (a) to (d) and Article 42 on just and humane conditions of work with maternity relief; the fundamental duty in Article 51A(e) to renounce practices derogatory to the dignity of women; and the case bank used narrowly, namely Vishaka linking equality and dignity to workplace protection, Shayara Bano scrutinising a discriminatory personal-law practice and Joseph Shine rejecting a paternalistic adultery offence. Analysis: Articles 14, 15(1) and 16 establish that sex is not a permissible ground of differentiation, Article 15(3) then rescues differentiation that repairs disadvantage, which is why maternity relief and reserved seats are not exceptions to equality but instruments of it, and Article 21 read with the holdings converts the guarantee from non-discrimination into positive protection of safety, dignity and autonomy; the directive principles and the fundamental duty supply the non-justiciable frame that legislatures and citizens are asked to honour. Qualification: each holding is used narrowly for the proposition it decided, the directive principles are identified as non-justiciable, and no case is cited for a proposition wider than the owners record. Why this earns marks: it explains a perspective as a structure rather than as a list, and every step is carried by a named provision or a precisely bounded holding.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For 15 marks, spend one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing right/need -> institution -> eligibility -> delivery -> outcome -> remedy; state a thesis; write four to seven claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification points; reserve the final minute for dignity, accessibility, portability, grievance, denominator, fiscal and causal limits.

How to improve this answer: For "PYQ DEMAND CARD 5 - 2023 General Studies Paper II Question 12", replace the weakest scheme-catalogue point with one named rights-holder, duty-bearer, eligibility bottleneck, safeguard, grievance route, process/outcome indicator and source-status qualification.

PYQ DEMAND CARD 6 - 2023 General Studies Paper II Question 14

Demand: The contribution of civil society groups for women's effective and meaningful participation and representation in state legislatures in India, asked with the instruction to discuss, 15 marks, 250 words, exactly as recorded in the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger and as printed in the locally held official paper.

Status: Routed to this owner in the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger as the Social Justice Core route, with a retained civil-society link to the Governance owner, and that shared ownership is stated openly rather than claimed exclusively. No official answer key exists for a Mains demand and none is claimed.

Model solution: Claim: civil society groups contribute most where the State's instruments stop, namely at candidate supply, capability and the conversion of a seat into meaningful participation, and least where party control decides outcomes. Named evidence and example: the reservation instruments themselves, Articles 243D and 243T at the local level and the 106th Amendment reservation for the Lok Sabha and State Assemblies sequenced by Article 334A; the recorded limit that presence does not defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women; the Governance owner's self-help-group social-capital mechanism, which the 2025 demand routed to this topic also engages and which builds the bonding, bridging and linking ties from which local women leaders emerge; the Time Use Survey evidence on care time as a constraint on political availability; and the service architecture of One Stop Centres and the Women Helpline under the safety track, which civil society organisations frequently help operate. Analysis: civil society acts at four points, by identifying and preparing candidates from federations and community organisations, by training elected women in procedure, budgets and committee work so that presence becomes participation, by supplying the legal and support services that make public life survivable for a woman facing retaliation, and by documenting proxy functioning so that the gap between the seat and the decision becomes visible; what it cannot do is control party nomination or the delimitation sequence, so its contribution is real but bounded. Qualification: no count of organisations, trained representatives or nominations is asserted, and the detailed social-capital theory is credited to the Governance owner rather than re-derived here. Why this earns marks: it discusses a contribution by locating it precisely in the chain from candidate to decision and by naming what civil society cannot deliver.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on "PYQ DEMAND CARD 6 - 2023 General Studies Paper II Question 14", every clause, constitutional/statutory/policy distinction, rights-holder and institution map, eligibility/exclusion and delivery chain, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, accountability and qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Claim: civil society groups contribute most where the State's instruments stop, namely at candidate supply, capability and the conversion of a seat into meaningful participation, and least where party control decides outcomes. Named evidence and example: the reservation instruments themselves, Articles 243D and 243T at the local level and the 106th Amendment reservation for the Lok Sabha and State Assemblies sequenced by Article 334A; the recorded limit that presence does not defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women; the Governance owner's self-help-group social-capital mechanism, which the 2025 demand routed to this topic also engages and which builds the bonding, bridging and linking ties from which local women leaders emerge; the Time Use Survey evidence on care time as a constraint on political availability; and the service architecture of One Stop Centres and the Women Helpline under the safety track, which civil society organisations frequently help operate. Analysis: civil society acts at four points, by identifying and preparing candidates from federations and community organisations, by training elected women in procedure, budgets and committee work so that presence becomes participation, by supplying the legal and support services that make public life survivable for a woman facing retaliation, and by documenting proxy functioning so that the gap between the seat and the decision becomes visible; what it cannot do is control party nomination or the delimitation sequence, so its contribution is real but bounded. Qualification: no count of organisations, trained representatives or nominations is asserted, and the detailed social-capital theory is credited to the Governance owner rather than re-derived here. Why this earns marks: it discusses a contribution by locating it precisely in the chain from candidate to decision and by naming what civil society cannot deliver.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: PYQ DEMAND CARD 6 - 2023 General Studies Paper II Question 14 Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

Counter-position / limit: A constitutional promise, prohibition, reservation provision, scheme catalogue, allocation, registration count or headline statistic cannot alone establish accessible implementation, adequate benefit, dignity, remedy or attributable outcome; test eligibility, institutions, frontline capacity, intersectionality, regional variation, grievance and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Claim: civil society groups contribute most where the State's instruments stop, namely at candidate supply, capability and the conversion of a seat into meaningful participation, and least where party control decides outcomes. Named evidence and example: the reservation instruments themselves, Articles 243D and 243T at the local level and the 106th Amendment reservation for the Lok Sabha and State Assemblies sequenced by Article 334A; the recorded limit that presence does not defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women; the Governance owner's self-help-group social-capital mechanism, which the 2025 demand routed to this topic also engages and which builds the bonding, bridging and linking ties from which local women leaders emerge; the Time Use Survey evidence on care time as a constraint on political availability; and the service architecture of One Stop Centres and the Women Helpline under the safety track, which civil society organisations frequently help operate. Analysis: civil society acts at four points, by identifying and preparing candidates from federations and community organisations, by training elected women in procedure, budgets and committee work so that presence becomes participation, by supplying the legal and support services that make public life survivable for a woman facing retaliation, and by documenting proxy functioning so that the gap between the seat and the decision becomes visible; what it cannot do is control party nomination or the delimitation sequence, so its contribution is real but bounded. Qualification: no count of organisations, trained representatives or nominations is asserted, and the detailed social-capital theory is credited to the Governance owner rather than re-derived here. Why this earns marks: it discusses a contribution by locating it precisely in the chain from candidate to decision and by naming what civil society cannot deliver.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For 15 marks, spend one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing right/need -> institution -> eligibility -> delivery -> outcome -> remedy; state a thesis; write four to seven claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification points; reserve the final minute for dignity, accessibility, portability, grievance, denominator, fiscal and causal limits.

How to improve this answer: For "PYQ DEMAND CARD 6 - 2023 General Studies Paper II Question 14", replace the weakest scheme-catalogue point with one named rights-holder, duty-bearer, eligibility bottleneck, safeguard, grievance route, process/outcome indicator and source-status qualification.

PYQ DEMAND CARD 7 - 2025 General Studies Paper II Question 6

Demand: Women's social capital complements in advancing empowerment and gender equity, asked with the instruction to explain, 10 marks, 150 words, exactly as recorded in the audited 2024-2025 Mains routing ledger and as printed in the locally held official 2025 General Studies Paper II.

Status: Routed to this owner in the audited 2024-2025 Mains routing ledger as the owning topic. No official answer key exists for a Mains demand and none is claimed.

Model solution: Claim: social capital complements rather than substitutes, because it converts entitlements that already exist into access, and it fails where the entitlement itself is missing. Named evidence and example: the Governance owner's bonding, bridging and linking distinction, where bonding ties operate within a group, bridging ties across groups and linking ties between citizens and institutions, credited to that owner rather than re-derived here; the empowerment track of the umbrella mission, which carries childcare, shelter and working-women accommodation; the maternity split between the twenty-six-week employer obligation and the conditional transfer, whose second version pays 5,000 rupees in two instalments for a first child and 6,000 rupees in one instalment for a second child if that child is a girl; the fifth-round survey baseline that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported an account they themselves used and 54.0 per cent a mobile phone they themselves used; and the recorded caution that these are access indicators rather than proof of control. Analysis: bonding capital lowers the social cost of a woman leaving the household to attend a meeting, bridging capital carries information about a scheme across village and caste lines, and linking capital converts a form into a sanctioned claim before an official, which is why group membership raises take-up of transfers, credit and services that formally existed all along; it complements equity instruments because it cannot create a maternity entitlement, a protection order or a reserved seat, only the ability to reach them. Qualification: the survey values are cited with their round and must not be mixed with the sixth round released on 29 May 2026, and no membership, credit or take-up count is asserted. Why this earns marks: it explains the word complements literally, names the mechanism at three levels and states exactly where social capital stops.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on "PYQ DEMAND CARD 7 - 2025 General Studies Paper II Question 6", every clause, constitutional/statutory/policy distinction, rights-holder and institution map, eligibility/exclusion and delivery chain, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, accountability and qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Claim: social capital complements rather than substitutes, because it converts entitlements that already exist into access, and it fails where the entitlement itself is missing. Named evidence and example: the Governance owner's bonding, bridging and linking distinction, where bonding ties operate within a group, bridging ties across groups and linking ties between citizens and institutions, credited to that owner rather than re-derived here; the empowerment track of the umbrella mission, which carries childcare, shelter and working-women accommodation; the maternity split between the twenty-six-week employer obligation and the conditional transfer, whose second version pays 5,000 rupees in two instalments for a first child and 6,000 rupees in one instalment for a second child if that child is a girl; the fifth-round survey baseline that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported an account they themselves used and 54.0 per cent a mobile phone they themselves used; and the recorded caution that these are access indicators rather than proof of control. Analysis: bonding capital lowers the social cost of a woman leaving the household to attend a meeting, bridging capital carries information about a scheme across village and caste lines, and linking capital converts a form into a sanctioned claim before an official, which is why group membership raises take-up of transfers, credit and services that formally existed all along; it complements equity instruments because it cannot create a maternity entitlement, a protection order or a reserved seat, only the ability to reach them. Qualification: the survey values are cited with their round and must not be mixed with the sixth round released on 29 May 2026, and no membership, credit or take-up count is asserted. Why this earns marks: it explains the word complements literally, names the mechanism at three levels and states exactly where social capital stops.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: PYQ DEMAND CARD 7 - 2025 General Studies Paper II Question 6 Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

2. Claim and named evidence: Status: Routed to this owner in the audited 2024-2025 Mains routing ledger as the owning topic. No official answer key exists for a Mains demand and none is claimed. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

Counter-position / limit: A constitutional promise, prohibition, reservation provision, scheme catalogue, allocation, registration count or headline statistic cannot alone establish accessible implementation, adequate benefit, dignity, remedy or attributable outcome; test eligibility, institutions, frontline capacity, intersectionality, regional variation, grievance and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Claim: social capital complements rather than substitutes, because it converts entitlements that already exist into access, and it fails where the entitlement itself is missing. Named evidence and example: the Governance owner's bonding, bridging and linking distinction, where bonding ties operate within a group, bridging ties across groups and linking ties between citizens and institutions, credited to that owner rather than re-derived here; the empowerment track of the umbrella mission, which carries childcare, shelter and working-women accommodation; the maternity split between the twenty-six-week employer obligation and the conditional transfer, whose second version pays 5,000 rupees in two instalments for a first child and 6,000 rupees in one instalment for a second child if that child is a girl; the fifth-round survey baseline that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported an account they themselves used and 54.0 per cent a mobile phone they themselves used; and the recorded caution that these are access indicators rather than proof of control. Analysis: bonding capital lowers the social cost of a woman leaving the household to attend a meeting, bridging capital carries information about a scheme across village and caste lines, and linking capital converts a form into a sanctioned claim before an official, which is why group membership raises take-up of transfers, credit and services that formally existed all along; it complements equity instruments because it cannot create a maternity entitlement, a protection order or a reserved seat, only the ability to reach them. Qualification: the survey values are cited with their round and must not be mixed with the sixth round released on 29 May 2026, and no membership, credit or take-up count is asserted. Why this earns marks: it explains the word complements literally, names the mechanism at three levels and states exactly where social capital stops.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For 15 marks, spend one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing right/need -> institution -> eligibility -> delivery -> outcome -> remedy; state a thesis; write four to seven claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification points; reserve the final minute for dignity, accessibility, portability, grievance, denominator, fiscal and causal limits.

How to improve this answer: For "PYQ DEMAND CARD 7 - 2025 General Studies Paper II Question 6", replace the weakest scheme-catalogue point with one named rights-holder, duty-bearer, eligibility bottleneck, safeguard, grievance route, process/outcome indicator and source-status qualification.

ORIGINAL MAINS 1 - 10 MARKS

Question: Distinguish the protective instruments of Indian gender-justice policy from its empowerment instruments, and explain why a complete answer needs both. Answer in about 150 words.

Model thesis: Protection and empowerment are separate causal chains that meet only in outcome, so the distinction must be drawn by naming the statute or scheme that carries each chain and then showing that neither alone converts a formal rule into capability.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag.
- The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately.

- Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme.
- The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered.

Qualified conclusion: Protection and empowerment are separate causal chains that meet only in outcome, so the distinction must be drawn by naming the statute or scheme that carries each chain and then showing that neither alone converts a formal rule into capability.

Demand decoding: The directive explain requires a direct position on "Distinguish the protective instruments of Indian gender-justice policy from its empowerment...", every clause, constitutional/statutory/policy distinction, rights-holder and institution map, eligibility/exclusion and delivery chain, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, accountability and qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Protection and empowerment are separate causal chains that meet only in outcome, so the distinction must be drawn by naming the statute or scheme that carries each chain and then showing that neither alone converts a formal rule into capability.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
2. Claim and named evidence: The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

3. Claim and named evidence: Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
4. Claim and named evidence: The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

Counter-position / limit: A constitutional promise, prohibition, reservation provision, scheme catalogue, allocation, registration count or headline statistic cannot alone establish accessible implementation, adequate benefit, dignity, remedy or attributable outcome; test eligibility, institutions, frontline capacity, intersectionality, regional variation, grievance and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Protection and empowerment are separate causal chains that meet only in outcome, so the distinction must be drawn by naming the statute or scheme that carries each chain and then showing that neither alone converts a formal rule into capability.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For 10 marks, spend one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing right/need -> institution -> eligibility -> delivery -> outcome -> remedy; state a thesis; write four to seven claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification points; reserve the final minute for dignity, accessibility, portability, grievance, denominator, fiscal and causal limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains mechanisms rather than listing schemes, uses named India-centric evidence and preserves legal, institutional, group, eligibility, implementation, fiscal, data and outcome distinctions.

How to improve this answer: For "Distinguish the protective instruments of Indian gender-justice policy from its empowerment...", replace the weakest scheme-catalogue point with one named rights-holder, duty-bearer, eligibility bottleneck, safeguard, grievance route, process/outcome indicator and source-status qualification.

ORIGINAL MAINS 2 - 10 MARKS

Question: Examine why the Gender Budget Statement is an accountability instrument for allocation rather than evidence of women's empowerment. Answer in about 150 words.

Model thesis: The Statement is an input classification and not an outcome measure, so the examination must state what its two parts actually record, name the outcome instruments that would test empowerment and keep the reform proposal separate from the current design.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature.

- The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference.
- The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition.
- Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package.

Qualified conclusion: The Statement is an input classification and not an outcome measure, so the examination must state what its two parts actually record, name the outcome instruments that would test empowerment and keep the reform proposal separate from the current design.

Demand decoding: The directive examine requires a direct position on "Examine why the Gender Budget Statement is an accountability instrument for allocation rather...", every clause, constitutional/statutory/policy distinction, rights-holder and institution map, eligibility/exclusion and delivery chain, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, accountability and qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: The Statement is an input classification and not an outcome measure, so the examination must state what its two parts actually record, name the outcome instruments that would test empowerment and keep the reform proposal separate from the current design.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
2. Claim and named evidence: The owners carry a dated access baseline from the fifth round of the National Family Health Survey, namely that 78.6 per cent of women aged fifteen to forty-nine reported having a bank or savings account that they themselves used and 54.0 per cent reported owning or using a mobile phone, and they state expressly that these are access indicators rather than proof of equal control over assets, income or decision-making; they further record that the sixth round for 2023-24 was released on 29 May 2026 and that its indicators must be cited separately rather than mixed with the fifth round, which makes round discipline an examinable rule and not a stylistic preference. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

3. Claim and named evidence: The owners define gender equality as the same legal treatment, rights and opportunities regardless of gender, applied through outcome-neutral rules; gender equity as differentiated treatment that compensates for structural disadvantage so that fair outcomes become possible, which is a recognition that starting conditions are unequal; and women's empowerment as the expansion of women's agency, capability and voice, that is, the outcome that appears when protective and affirmative instruments actually combine; the examinable value of the trichotomy is architectural rather than lexical, because equality is the constitutional baseline, equity is the instrument layer of protective law and affirmative schemes, and empowerment is the measured outcome, so an answer that treats the three as synonyms has collapsed a causal chain into a definition. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
4. Claim and named evidence: Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

Counter-position / limit: A constitutional promise, prohibition, reservation provision, scheme catalogue, allocation, registration count or headline statistic cannot alone establish accessible implementation, adequate benefit, dignity, remedy or attributable outcome; test eligibility, institutions, frontline capacity, intersectionality, regional variation, grievance and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: The Statement is an input classification and not an outcome measure, so the examination must state what its two parts actually record, name the outcome instruments that would test empowerment and keep the reform proposal separate from the current design.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For 10 marks, spend one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing right/need -> institution -> eligibility -> delivery -> outcome -> remedy; state a thesis; write four to seven claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification points; reserve the final minute for dignity, accessibility, portability, grievance, denominator, fiscal and causal limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains mechanisms rather than listing schemes, uses named India-centric evidence and preserves legal, institutional, group, eligibility, implementation, fiscal, data and outcome distinctions.

How to improve this answer: For "Examine why the Gender Budget Statement is an accountability instrument for allocation rather...", replace the weakest scheme-catalogue point with one named rights-holder, duty-bearer, eligibility bottleneck, safeguard, grievance route, process/outcome indicator and source-status qualification.

ORIGINAL MAINS 3 - 15 MARKS

Question: Critically examine the claim that the Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 secures effective access to justice for aggrieved women. Answer in about 250 words.

Model thesis: The Act is generous in scope and dependent in delivery, so the critical examination must accept the breadth of the domestic relationship and the reliefs, then test access against Protection Officer capacity, the contested shared-household right and the difference between registered cases and prevalence.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag.
- The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract.
- The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it.
- Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package.

Qualified conclusion: The Act is generous in scope and dependent in delivery, so the critical examination must accept the breadth of the domestic relationship and the reliefs, then test access against Protection Officer capacity, the contested shared-household right and the difference between registered cases and prevalence.

Demand decoding: The directive critically examine requires a direct position on "Critically examine the claim that the Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005...", every clause, constitutional/statutory/policy distinction, rights-holder and institution map, eligibility/exclusion and delivery chain, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, accountability and qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: The Act is generous in scope and dependent in delivery, so the critical examination must accept the breadth of the domestic relationship and the reliefs, then test access against Protection Officer capacity, the contested shared-household right and the difference between registered cases and prevalence.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 is recorded by the owners as primarily a civil and protective statute rather than a general penal code for domestic violence: an aggrieved woman may approach a Protection Officer or a Magistrate for a protection order, a residence order and monetary relief, and the implementing arm named in the Act is the Protection Officer; the criminal edge is precise and narrow, because breach of a protection order is an offence under Section 31, while cruelty may separately attract prosecution under the general penal law, so the accurate formulation is that the Act supplies civil remedies backed by a criminal consequence for breach, and describing it either as wholly civil or as a general criminal statute for domestic violence is the trap the owners flag. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
2. Claim and named evidence: The owners separate the two principal reliefs by function: a protection order restrains the respondent from committing domestic violence, from contacting the aggrieved woman and from related acts, so its object is physical safety, whereas a residence order secures the aggrieved woman's right to reside in the shared household regardless of whether she holds any ownership interest in it, so its object is housing security; monetary relief is a third and distinct head; the boundary the owners record is that the shared-household residence right is contested where the property belongs to parents-in-law rather than to the husband, which is why a well-marked answer names the relief it means instead of writing about the Act in the abstract. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
3. Claim and named evidence: The owners record that the Act reaches an aggrieved woman who is a wife, a qualifying live-in partner, a sister, a mother or any woman in a domestic relationship, and that the statute expressly covers a relationship in the nature of marriage, so a woman in a live-in relationship is within scope subject to factual determination by the Magistrate; the significance is that the Act is drafted around the household relationship rather than around marital status alone, which is why the recurring trap that the Act protects only legally married women is false, and why an answer that argues access to justice must attach the scope of the relationship to the capacity of the Protection Officer who actually operates it. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
4. Claim and named evidence: Two boundaries close this topic. First, registered crime data record cases that entered the system and are therefore shaped by reporting behaviour and police practice, whereas survey prevalence estimates the underlying rate, so an answer must say which of the two it is using and must not read a change in registration as a change in violence; the same discipline separates the Gender Budget Statement's allocation from any survey-measured outcome. Second, ownership is stated openly rather than assumed: the audited ledgers route seven Mains demands and one objective demand here, the official key for that objective demand is recorded as not held locally so no option is inferred, and the 2024 General Studies Paper I demand on equality, equity and empowerment is routed by the ledger to the Indian Society owner and is therefore not converted into a demand card in this package. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

Counter-position / limit: A constitutional promise, prohibition, reservation provision, scheme catalogue, allocation, registration count or headline statistic cannot alone establish accessible implementation, adequate benefit, dignity, remedy or attributable outcome; test eligibility, institutions, frontline capacity, intersectionality, regional variation, grievance and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: The Act is generous in scope and dependent in delivery, so the critical examination must accept the breadth of the domestic relationship and the reliefs, then test access against Protection Officer capacity, the contested shared-household right and the difference between registered cases and prevalence.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For 15 marks, spend one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing right/need -> institution -> eligibility -> delivery -> outcome -> remedy; state a thesis; write four to seven claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification points; reserve the final minute for dignity, accessibility, portability, grievance, denominator, fiscal and causal limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains mechanisms rather than listing schemes, uses named India-centric evidence and preserves legal, institutional, group, eligibility, implementation, fiscal, data and outcome distinctions.

How to improve this answer: For "Critically examine the claim that the Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005...", replace the weakest scheme-catalogue point with one named rights-holder, duty-bearer, eligibility bottleneck, safeguard, grievance route, process/outcome indicator and source-status qualification.

ORIGINAL MAINS 4 - 15 MARKS

Question: Assess whether the Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace Act, 2013 has extended workplace safety beyond the organised sector. Answer in about 250 words.

Model thesis: Coverage was extended in law and only partly in delivery, so the assessment must set the Internal Committee threshold against the Local Committee route, use the inclusion of a dwelling place within workplace as the decisive test case and close on district capacity rather than on statutory intent.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately.
- The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false.
- Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme.
- The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier.

Qualified conclusion: Coverage was extended in law and only partly in delivery, so the assessment must set the Internal Committee threshold against the Local Committee route, use the inclusion of a dwelling place within workplace as the decisive test case and close on district capacity rather than on statutory intent.

Demand decoding: The directive assess requires a direct position on "Assess whether the Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace Act, 2013 has extended workplace...", every clause, constitutional/statutory/policy distinction, rights-holder and institution map, eligibility/exclusion and delivery chain, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, accountability and qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Coverage was extended in law and only partly in delivery, so the assessment must set the Internal Committee threshold against the Local Committee route, use the inclusion of a dwelling place within workplace as the decisive test case and close on district capacity rather than on statutory intent.

Analytical body:

- 1. Claim and named evidence: The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013 defines sexual harassment as unwelcome physical, verbal or non-verbal conduct of a sexual nature, and requires an employer to constitute an Internal Committee wherever employee strength is ten or more; the owners record that a complaint is to be inquired into within ninety days, that non-compliance attracts penalties and that repeat default can lead to cancellation of licence or registration; they also record the recurring compliance failure that the required external member with experience of women's issues is often not appointed, which means the statutory design and the delivered committee are two different objects and must be argued separately.

Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
- 2. Claim and named evidence: The Local Committee is constituted at district level by the District Officer to receive complaints from women working in establishments with fewer than ten employees and from women in the unorganised sector, and the owners record that a dwelling place or house is included within the meaning of workplace, which is the route by which a domestic worker may bring a complaint; the same owners record that Local Committee capacity varies across districts and that practical awareness remains weak, so the correct statement is that coverage was extended in law to the unorganised sector while delivery depends on a district body whose functioning is uneven, and the trap that the statute applies only to the organised sector is false.

Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
- 3. Claim and named evidence: Mission Shakti was restructured and launched as an umbrella scheme of the Ministry of Women and Child Development in 2021, subsuming erstwhile standalone schemes into two sub-schemes: Sambal, the safety and security track, which the owners illustrate with One Stop Centres, the Women Helpline, Beti Bachao Beti Padhao and Nari Adalat, and Samarthya, the empowerment track, which the owners connect to shelter and rehabilitation, maternity benefit, childcare, working-women accommodation and empowerment support; the durable examinable fact is the two-sub-scheme architecture rather than any dashboard count, and the owners instruct that current ministry guidelines be checked before a component is attached to a named sub-scheme. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
- 4. Claim and named evidence: The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

Counter-position / limit: A constitutional promise, prohibition, reservation provision, scheme catalogue, allocation, registration count or headline statistic cannot alone establish accessible implementation, adequate benefit, dignity, remedy or attributable outcome; test eligibility, institutions, frontline capacity, intersectionality, regional variation, grievance and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Coverage was extended in law and only partly in delivery, so the assessment must set the Internal Committee threshold against the Local Committee route, use the inclusion of a dwelling place within workplace as the decisive test case and close on district capacity rather than on statutory intent.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For 15 marks, spend one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing right/need -> institution -> eligibility -> delivery -> outcome -> remedy; state a thesis; write four to seven claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification points; reserve the final minute for dignity, accessibility, portability, grievance, denominator, fiscal and causal limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains mechanisms rather than listing schemes, uses named India-centric evidence and preserves legal, institutional, group, eligibility, implementation, fiscal, data and outcome distinctions.

How to improve this answer: For "Assess whether the Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace Act, 2013 has extended workplace...", replace the weakest scheme-catalogue point with one named rights-holder, duty-bearer, eligibility bottleneck, safeguard, grievance route, process/outcome indicator and source-status qualification.

ORIGINAL MAINS 5 - 20 MARKS

Question: Analyse how maternity support in India is divided between a labour-law entitlement and a targeted welfare transfer, and what that division means for women's workforce participation. Answer in about 300 words.

Model thesis: The division tracks the formality of employment rather than the fact of motherhood, so the analysis must separate the employer obligation from the conditional transfer, connect both to unpaid care time and close by naming the infrastructure that would actually release that time.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered.
- Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer.
- The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier.
- The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature.

Qualified conclusion: The division tracks the formality of employment rather than the fact of motherhood, so the analysis must separate the employer obligation from the conditional transfer, connect both to unpaid care time and close by naming the infrastructure that would actually release that time.

Demand decoding: The directive analyse requires a direct position on "Analyse how maternity support in India is divided between a labour-law entitlement and a...", every clause, constitutional/statutory/policy distinction, rights-holder and institution map, eligibility/exclusion and delivery chain, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, accountability and qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: The division tracks the formality of employment rather than the fact of motherhood, so the analysis must separate the employer obligation from the conditional transfer, connect both to unpaid care time and close by naming the infrastructure that would actually release that time.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: The Maternity Benefit Act, 1961 as amended in 2017 is a labour-law entitlement enforced against the employer: the owners record twenty-six weeks of paid maternity leave for the first two surviving children in covered establishments with ten or more employees; the entitlement therefore runs with covered employment rather than with motherhood, which is precisely why it does not reach a woman in unorganised or own-account work, and why an answer about women's workforce participation must state that the strongest maternity instrument in Indian law is available only where the employment relationship itself is formal and covered. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
2. Claim and named evidence: Under the second version of the Pradhan Mantri Matru Vandana Yojana the owners record a conditional direct benefit transfer of 5,000 rupees in two instalments for the first child and 6,000 rupees in a single instalment for a second child if that child is a girl, subject to health, birth and immunisation conditions, with exclusions turning on regular government or public-sector employment or receipt of a similar benefit rather than on a simple organised and unorganised divide; the transfer compensates for lost wages around childbirth but creates no leave entitlement binding on any employer, so a statute and a budgetary transfer must never be merged into one instrument in an answer. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
3. Claim and named evidence: The owners record Time Use Survey evidence as the instrument that makes cooking, cleaning and care burdens visible as work, and they classify childcare, water supply, transport and safe work as economic infrastructure rather than as welfare extras, because each of them converts unpaid time into available time; the argument that follows is that a woman's participation is constrained by time poverty and mobility as much as by any formal rule, which is why gender-sensitive programme design targets those constraints, and why an intervention answer that stops at education and empowerment schemes has not yet reached the recorded structural barrier. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
4. Claim and named evidence: The Gender Budget Statement in the Union Budget is recorded by the owners as an accountability and transparency instrument with two parts, Part A listing schemes with a hundred per cent women-specific allocation and Part B listing schemes with a thirty to ninety-nine per cent pro-women allocation, and it is expressly not a separate budget; the examinable limitation is that the Statement tracks the input, so allocation reported in either part can rise while survey-measured outcomes do not, and the owners record an analytical reform proposal that a third part track outcome indicators rather than allocation alone, which is a recommendation and not an existing feature. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

Counter-position / limit: A constitutional promise, prohibition, reservation provision, scheme catalogue, allocation, registration count or headline statistic cannot alone establish accessible implementation, adequate benefit, dignity, remedy or attributable outcome; test eligibility, institutions, frontline capacity, intersectionality, regional variation, grievance and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: The division tracks the formality of employment rather than the fact of motherhood, so the analysis must separate the employer obligation from the conditional transfer, connect both to unpaid care time and close by naming the infrastructure that would actually release that time.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For 20 marks, spend one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing right/need -> institution -> eligibility -> delivery -> outcome -> remedy; state a thesis; write four to seven claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification points; reserve the final minute for dignity, accessibility, portability, grievance, denominator, fiscal and causal limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains mechanisms rather than listing schemes, uses named India-centric evidence and preserves legal, institutional, group, eligibility, implementation, fiscal, data and outcome distinctions.

How to improve this answer: For "Analyse how maternity support in India is divided between a labour-law entitlement and a...", replace the weakest scheme-catalogue point with one named rights-holder, duty-bearer, eligibility bottleneck, safeguard, grievance route, process/outcome indicator and source-status qualification.

ORIGINAL MAINS 6 - 20 MARKS

Question: Evaluate the claim that statutory oversight and reserved political presence together secure gender justice in India. Answer in about 300 words.

Model thesis: Oversight without enforcement and presence without power are the two recorded limits, so the evaluation must state the Commission's actual powers, the entrenchment question raised by constitutionalisation, the sequencing condition on the one-third legislative reservation and the narrow judicial holdings that carry the constitutional argument.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution.
- The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming.
- The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation.

- The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names.

Qualified conclusion: Oversight without enforcement and presence without power are the two recorded limits, so the evaluation must state the Commission's actual powers, the entrenchment question raised by constitutionalisation, the sequencing condition on the one-third legislative reservation and the narrow judicial holdings that carry the constitutional argument.

Demand decoding: The directive evaluate requires a direct position on "Evaluate the claim that statutory oversight and reserved political presence together secure...", every clause, constitutional/statutory/policy distinction, rights-holder and institution map, eligibility/exclusion and delivery chain, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, accountability and qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Oversight without enforcement and presence without power are the two recorded limits, so the evaluation must state the Commission's actual powers, the entrenchment question raised by constitutionalisation, the sequencing condition on the one-third legislative reservation and the narrow judicial holdings that carry the constitutional argument.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: The National Commission for Women was established under the National Commission for Women Act, 1990 with a Chairperson and Members as notified, and the owners record its mandate as investigating complaints of deprivation of women's rights, taking suo motu cognisance of matters relating to women, reviewing existing legislation and recommending amendments, advising on policy and inspecting institutions such as jails and remand homes that affect women; the decisive limitation the owners state is that the Commission recommends rather than enforces, because it cannot make an order that binds like a court, so follow-up depends on executive or judicial action and any answer that treats a recommendation as an enforceable direction has overstated the institution. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
2. Claim and named evidence: The owners insist on a status distinction that a routed Mains demand tests directly: the National Commission for Women is a statutory body created by ordinary legislation and can therefore be altered by ordinary legislation, whereas the National Commission for Scheduled Castes under Article 338 and the National Commission for Scheduled Tribes under Article 338A are constitutional bodies whose mandate is entrenched in the Constitution; constitutionalisation of a commission accordingly means moving its existence, composition and duties out of the reach of an ordinary amending majority and, in the pattern of Articles 338 and 338A, giving it a constitutionally stated duty to investigate and monitor safeguards and to report, so the question of whether such a step would deliver greater gender justice is a question about entrenchment, capacity and follow-up rather than about renaming. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.
3. Claim and named evidence: The owners record that Articles 243D and 243T reserve seats for women in panchayats and municipalities, that the advanced companion states this local reservation as a one-third share under the 73rd Amendment settlement, and that the 106th Amendment creates a one-third reservation in the Lok Sabha and the State Legislative Assemblies which becomes operational only after the census and delimitation sequence contemplated by Article 334A; the analytical limit the owners state is decisive for a routed demand, namely that numerical presence does not by itself defeat proxy control, party gatekeeping or caste and class differences among women, so a comment on limited impact on patriarchy must argue the gap between presence and power rather than deny the reservation. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

4. Claim and named evidence: The owners supply a case bank with an express instruction to use each holding narrowly: Vishaka linked equality and dignity to workplace protection and is the doctrinal ancestor of the statutory Internal Committee route, Shayara Bano scrutinised a discriminatory personal-law practice and is authority about that practice rather than about personal law at large, and Joseph Shine rejected a paternalistic adultery offence and is authority about the constitutional treatment of a woman as an autonomous person rather than as marital property; the constitutional-perspectives demand routed to this topic is answered by pairing provisions with holdings at that level of precision instead of listing case names. Analysis: Connect right or deprivation -> institutional duty and eligibility rule -> frontline implementation -> differentiated access and outcome -> grievance, audit or course correction. Qualification: State internal group and regional variation, legal/operative status, denominator, fiscal or causal limit, accessibility, dignity, privacy, portability or residual exclusion.

Counter-position / limit: A constitutional promise, prohibition, reservation provision, scheme catalogue, allocation, registration count or headline statistic cannot alone establish accessible implementation, adequate benefit, dignity, remedy or attributable outcome; test eligibility, institutions, frontline capacity, intersectionality, regional variation, grievance and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Oversight without enforcement and presence without power are the two recorded limits, so the evaluation must state the Commission's actual powers, the entrenchment question raised by constitutionalisation, the sequencing condition on the one-third legislative reservation and the narrow judicial holdings that carry the constitutional argument.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For 20 marks, spend one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing right/need -> institution -> eligibility -> delivery -> outcome -> remedy; state a thesis; write four to seven claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification points; reserve the final minute for dignity, accessibility, portability, grievance, denominator, fiscal and causal limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains mechanisms rather than listing schemes, uses named India-centric evidence and preserves legal, institutional, group, eligibility, implementation, fiscal, data and outcome distinctions.

How to improve this answer: For "Evaluate the claim that statutory oversight and reserved political presence together secure...", replace the weakest scheme-catalogue point with one named rights-holder, duty-bearer, eligibility bottleneck, safeguard, grievance route, process/outcome indicator and source-status qualification.