1. Classification of Services: All-India, Central and State

GS-II Polity -
Public
Administration

NEWS TRIGGER

Mission Karmayogi and the lateral-entry debate have renewed attention on how India's civil service is structured into distinct, jointly controlled tiers.

INTRO & ORIGIN

India runs a three-tier civil service: All-India Services (AIS), Central Services and State Services. AIS officers are recruited and trained by the Centre but serve both the Union and the states by turns, so control over them is jointly shared.

The Indian Civil Service (ICS) became the IAS and the Imperial Police (IP) became the IPS in 1947; the Indian Forest Service (IFoS) was created later as the third All-India Service.

TIMELINE

1947 — ICS renamed IAS; IP renamed IPS at Independence.

1951 — All-India Services Act enacted to govern AIS conditions.

1966 — Indian Forest Service (IFoS) created as the third AIS.

Ongoing — Up to 33⅓% of senior AIS posts filled by promotion from state services.

STRUCTURE OF THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE

KEY DATA

Feature	All-India Services	Central Services	State Services
Recruitment	UPSC / Centre	UPSC / SSC	State PSC
Ultimate control	Union (Centre)	Union (Centre)	State Government
Immediate control	State/Centre where posted	Union	State Government
Example cadres	IAS, IPS, IFoS	Income Tax, Railways	State administrative service

STATIC THEORY

- Three categories exist: All-India Services, Central Services and State Services; only the first serves both levels of government.
- AIS officers combine Union recruitment/training with dual field control — immediate control by the state or Union where posted, ultimate control by the Centre.
- Gazetted (Class I-II, called 'officers') and non-gazetted (Class III-IV, called 'employees') is a separate classification cutting across all three tiers.
- Up to 33⅓% of senior AIS posts can be filled by promotion from state services through a UPSC-chaired selection committee, linking the state cadre to the all-India cadre.

MEMORY HOOK

AIS = Union recruits, BOTH levels serve | IFoS (1966) is the youngest of the three AIS.

MUST-KNOW FACTS

1. ICS became IAS and IP became IPS in 1947.
2. IFoS was created in 1966 as the third All-India Service.
3. The All-India Services Act, 1951 governs AIS conditions of service.
4. Up to 33⅓% of senior AIS posts are filled by promotion from state services.

UPSC TRAPS

WRONG: IFoS is a Central Service.

CORRECT: IFoS is the third All-India Service, created in 1966.

WRONG: All civil servants are recruited and controlled only by the Centre.

CORRECT: AIS is jointly controlled; State and Central Services are recruited and controlled separately.

MAINS ANGLE

Use the three-tier structure to argue that the AIS design was a deliberate federal compromise — uniform standards through central recruitment, but field accountability shared with the states.

2. Constitutional Basis: Articles 308–314

GS-II Polity -
Constitutional
Law

NEWS TRIGGER

Every debate on bureaucratic independence — from transfers to tenure security — eventually returns to the same four constitutional provisions in Part XIV.

INTRO & ORIGIN

Part XIV of the Constitution (Arts 308-323) deals with services under the Union and the states. Articles 309 to 312 form the operative core: recruitment power, the doctrine of pleasure, tenure safeguards and the creation of new All-India Services.

These provisions were designed to let legislatures regulate services while protecting civil servants from arbitrary executive action — balancing administrative discipline against security of tenure.

PART XIV: SERVICES UNDER THE UNION AND THE STATESArticles 308–314

Art 309 Recruitment & service conditions; President/Governor make rules until legislation exists.	Art 310 Doctrine of Pleasure — tenure at the pleasure of the President/Governor.
Art 311 Two safeguards against arbitrary dismissal, removal or reduction in rank.	Art 312 / 312-A Creation of new All-India Services; conditions for ex-Crown officers (28th Amdt, 1972).

KEY DATA

Article	Provision
309	Parliament/state legislatures regulate recruitment & service conditions
310	Doctrine of Pleasure
311	Twin safeguards against arbitrary dismissal
312	All-India Services via Rajya Sabha resolution (2/3 present & voting)
312-A	Parliament may vary conditions of ex-Crown officers (28th Amdt, 1972)
314	Repealed (28th Amdt, 1972)

STATIC THEORY

- Article 309 is the residual rule-making power: until a legislature enacts a law, the President or Governor makes service rules by executive order.
- Articles 310 and 311 must always be read together — 310 grants tenure at pleasure, 311 immediately qualifies it with procedural safeguards.
- Article 312 is the only route by which Parliament can create a new All-India Service, and it requires state buy-in through the Rajya Sabha, not a constitutional amendment.
- Article 314, which once protected the terms of pre-1950 (Crown) civil servants, was repealed by the 28th Amendment in 1972 as those protections became redundant.

MEMORY HOOK

309 = RULES | 310 = PLEASURE | 311 = SAFEGUARDS | 312 = NEW AIS (Rajya Sabha).

MUST-KNOW FACTS

1. Article 309 allows the President/Governor to make rules until a legislature enacts service law.
2. Article 311 protections apply only to civil posts, not to defence personnel.
3. Article 312-A (28th Amendment, 1972) let Parliament vary conditions of former Crown officers.
4. Article 314 was repealed by the 28th Amendment, 1972.

UPSC TRAPS

WRONG: Article 311 safeguards apply to defence personnel.

CORRECT: Only civilians in civil services/civil posts are covered; defence services are excluded.

WRONG: Article 314 is still in force.

CORRECT: Article 314 was repealed by the 28th Amendment, 1972.

MAINS ANGLE

Frame Part XIV as a single system: Art 309 creates the rules, Art 310 sets the default tenure principle, and Art 311 is the constitutional check that prevents that principle from becoming arbitrary.

STUDY LINK

Polity -> Public Services -> Fundamental Rights (Art 14, 21 as external checks)

HIGH3. Doctrine of Pleasure (Article 310) and Its LimitsGS-II Polity - Civil Service TenureNEWS TRIGGER

Frequent arbitrary transfers and removals of officials revive the question of how far the President's or Governor's 'pleasure' over civil servants actually extends.

INTRO & ORIGIN

Article 310 states that civil servants hold office 'during the pleasure' of the President or the Governor, meaning their tenure is not fixed and can, in principle, be ended without cause.

The doctrine was inherited from British constitutional practice, where Crown servants similarly held office at the pleasure of the Crown, with no vested right to a post.

WHY THE DOCTRINE OF PLEASURE IS NOT ABSOLUTESTATIC THEORY

- The doctrine of pleasure is the general rule of tenure; it is not the whole law on civil service dismissal.
- Article 311 operates as a specific constitutional exception carved out of Article 310's general rule.
- Judicial review adds a further external check, since courts can quash a pleasure-based removal that breaches natural justice or is arbitrary.
- The doctrine still explains why civil servants cannot claim a contractual or property right to their post.

MEMORY HOOK

PLEASURE (310) sets the rule — SAFEGUARDS (311) + COURTS narrow it.

MUST-KNOW FACTS

1. Article 310 provides that civil servants hold office during the pleasure of the President/Governor.
2. This pleasure is expressly limited by Article 311's twin safeguards.
3. Judicial review is available against orders passed in violation of Article 311 or natural justice.

UPSC TRAPS

WRONG: The doctrine of pleasure is an absolute, unreviewable power.

CORRECT: It is limited by Article 311 and by judicial review.

WRONG: Doctrine of pleasure gives civil servants a fixed, protected tenure.

CORRECT: It denies a fixed tenure in principle; Article 311 only adds procedural protection before removal.

MAINS ANGLE

Use the pleasure-versus-311 relationship to answer questions on administrative discipline versus security of tenure — the Constitution deliberately keeps both objectives in tension rather than resolving them absolutely.

4. Article 311 — Twin Safeguards and Three Exceptions

GS-II Polity - Civil Service
Protection

NEWS TRIGGER

Disciplinary action against officials for alleged misconduct is the most litigated area of service law, and Article 311 is the constitutional article most often invoked in such cases.

INTRO & ORIGIN

Article 311 is the single most tested provision on public services. It gives two distinct safeguards to civil servants and lists three situations where the inquiry safeguard can be dispensed with.

The 42nd Amendment, 1976 removed the second-stage hearing (representation against the proposed punishment), leaving only one opportunity of being heard, at the inquiry stage.

ARTICLE 311 AT A GLANCE

STATIC THEORY

- Safeguard (a) is a rank-based protection: the dismissing authority cannot be junior to the one that made the appointment.
- Safeguard (b) is a procedural protection requiring inquiry and hearing before dismissal, removal or reduction in rank.
- All three exceptions require the appointing/disciplinary authority to record reasons in writing before dispensing with inquiry.
- Post-1976, an aggrieved civil servant gets only one opportunity of being heard (at the inquiry stage), not a second round after the punishment is proposed.

MEMORY HOOK

3 exceptions = CONVICTION • NOT PRACTICABLE • SECURITY OF STATE.

MUST-KNOW FACTS

1. Article 311 gives two safeguards: no subordinate-authority dismissal, and inquiry-plus-hearing before dismissal/removal/reduction in rank.
2. Three exceptions dispense with the inquiry: criminal conviction, impracticability (with recorded reasons), and security of the State.
3. The 42nd Amendment, 1976 abolished the second-stage (punishment) hearing under Article 311.

UPSC TRAPS

WRONG: Article 311 requires two rounds of hearing even after the 42nd Amendment.

CORRECT: Only one opportunity (at the inquiry stage) remains after the 42nd Amendment, 1976.

WRONG: Any authority can dismiss a civil servant as long as an inquiry is held.

CORRECT: The dismissing authority also cannot be subordinate to the appointing authority — this is a separate safeguard.

MAINS ANGLE

Frame Article 311 as balancing two competing interests — administrative efficiency (via the three exceptions) and tenure security (via the twin safeguards) — and use the 42nd Amendment to show how that balance has shifted over time.

5. Article 312 — All-India Services and the Federal Safeguard

GS-II Polity -
Federalism and Services

NEWS TRIGGER

The stalled All-India Judicial Service (AIJS) proposal keeps Article 312 in the news every time judicial vacancies or delays in the subordinate judiciary are debated.

INTRO & ORIGIN

Article 312 lets Parliament create a new All-India Service — including an All-India Judicial Service — but only through a Rajya Sabha resolution, giving the states a constitutional veto over new all-India cadres.

This route was deliberately kept outside Article 368, so that creating an AIS needs only an ordinary law, once the Rajya Sabha resolution is passed by a 2/3 majority of members present and voting.

KEY DATA

AIJS Element	Status
Constitutional enabling provision	Article 312 (as amended by the 42nd Amendment, 1976)
Law creating the service	Not yet enacted
Minimum post rank	Cannot be inferior to a District Judge
Amendment route required	None — an ordinary law suffices

HOW A NEW ALL-INDIA SERVICE IS CREATED

STATIC THEORY

- Article 312 is a federal safeguard: without Rajya Sabha consent, Parliament cannot impose a new all-India cadre on the states.
- The All-India Services Act, 1951 already governs the existing AIS (IAS, IPS, IFoS) and serves as the template for any new AIS.
- The All-India Judicial Service has constitutional sanction since 1976 but has never been operationalised due to state and High Court resistance on federalism and language grounds.
- Creating an AIS, including the AIJS, does not require a constitutional amendment — Article 312 expressly allows an ordinary law once the Rajya Sabha resolution passes.

MEMORY HOOK

Art 312 = RAJYA SABHA (2/3 present & voting) protects the STATES.

MUST-KNOW FACTS

1. Article 312 requires a Rajya Sabha resolution by a 2/3 majority of members present and voting to create a new AIS.
2. The All-India Judicial Service was enabled by the 42nd Amendment, 1976, but has never been created.
3. An AIJS post cannot be inferior to that of a District Judge.
4. Creating an AIS under Article 312 does not require a constitutional amendment.

UPSC TRAPS

WRONG: A new All-India Service can be created through a Lok Sabha resolution.

CORRECT: It requires a Rajya Sabha resolution (2/3 present & voting) — a state-protecting device.

WRONG: The All-India Judicial Service already exists.

CORRECT: It is enabled by the 42nd Amendment but no law creating it has been passed.

WRONG: Creating an AIJS needs a constitutional amendment under Article 368.

CORRECT: Article 312 itself allows creation through an ordinary law.

MAINS ANGLE

"All-India Judicial Service: a remedy for judicial vacancies or a threat to federalism?" Use Article 312's Rajya Sabha safeguard to show the constitutional route exists, while state/High Court resistance explains why it remains unused.

9. Reform Debates: Lateral Entry, Mission Karmayogi and AIJS Revival

GS-II Polity - Civil Service Reform

NEWS TRIGGER

The 2024 withdrawal of the lateral-entry advertisement after a reservation row reopened the wider debate on how to modernise India's 'steel frame'.

INTRO & ORIGIN

Several parallel reform tracks are underway: lateral entry of domain experts, competency-based capacity building under Mission Karmayogi, the stalled AIJS proposal, and court-directed tenure protection.

These reforms respond to long-standing criticism that the bureaucracy is generalist, slow to acquire specialist skills, and vulnerable to politically motivated transfers.

SHOULD THE BUREAUCRACY BE STRUCTURALLY REFORMED?

STATIC THEORY

- Lateral entry aims to infuse specialist expertise into senior bureaucratic positions rather than relying solely on career civil servants.
- Mission Karmayogi (2020) reorients civil service training around defined competencies rather than generic seniority-based postings.
- The Supreme Court in T.S.R. Subramanian (2013), AIR 2014 SC 263, directed Civil Services Boards and a minimum assured tenure, and required oral instructions to be recorded in writing.
- The AIJS debate pits uniform judicial standards and faster recruitment against states' federalism and language concerns.

MEMORY HOOK

LATERAL ENTRY = experts | KARMAYOGI = competency | AIJS = stalled | T.S.R. SUBRAMANIAN = tenure.

MUST-KNOW FACTS

1. The 2024 lateral-entry advertisement was withdrawn after a reservation-in-lateral-entry controversy.
2. Mission Karmayogi (2020) is run through the Capacity Building Commission.
3. T.S.R. Subramanian v. Union of India (2013), AIR 2014 SC 263, directed Civil Services Boards, minimum tenure, and written instructions to civil servants.

UPSC TRAPS

WRONG: Lateral entry has been permanently institutionalised in the civil services.

CORRECT: The 2024 lateral-entry advertisement was withdrawn; the policy remains contested.

WRONG: T.S.R. Subramanian only addressed transfers, not tenure or instructions.

CORRECT: It jointly directed fixed tenure, Civil Services Boards and written (not oral) instructions.

MAINS ANGLE

"The steel frame needs re-tempering." Discuss civil-services reforms — lateral entry, Mission Karmayogi and fixed tenure — as complementary responses to bureaucratic rigidity and political interference.

11. Democratic Accountability and Judicial Review of Civil Service Actions

GS-II Polity -
Accountability
and Judicial Review

NEWS TRIGGER

Every major bureaucratic reform debate — lateral entry, fixed tenure, AIJS — ultimately asks the same question: who holds the civil service accountable, and to whom?

INTRO & ORIGIN

Civil servants are accountable through multiple, overlapping channels: constitutional safeguards (Art 311), judicial review of disciplinary action, and administrative reforms like Citizens' Charters and e-governance.

Judicial review developed as courts began scrutinising dismissal orders for violations of natural justice, mala fide intent, or non-compliance with Article 311's procedure.

ACCOUNTABILITY CHAIN FOR A DISCIPLINARY ACTION

STATIC THEORY

- Civil service accountability operates on two tracks: constitutional/procedural safeguards for the civil servant, and citizen-facing transparency tools for service delivery.
- Judicial review is available wherever Article 311's procedure is bypassed without valid grounds or reasons.
- Reforms such as Mission Karmayogi and the Citizens' Charter/Sevottam model extend accountability beyond individual dismissal cases to the quality of everyday service delivery.

MEMORY HOOK

ACCOUNTABILITY = 311 (to the officer) + COURTS (legality) + CHARTERS/e-GOV (to the citizen).

MUST-KNOW FACTS

1. Judicial review of civil-service dismissals looks for mala fides, arbitrariness or breach of natural justice.
2. Citizens' Charters and e-governance extend accountability to service delivery, beyond individual disciplinary cases.

UPSC TRAPS

WRONG: Civil service accountability is achieved only through Article 311.

CORRECT: It also operates through judicial review and citizen-facing reforms like Charters and e-governance.

MAINS ANGLE

Argue that a genuinely accountable civil service needs all three tracks together — constitutional safeguards for officers, judicial review for legality, and citizen-facing transparency reforms for service delivery.

6. Recruitment, Control and the 33⅓% Promotion Quota

GS-II Polity -
Cadre
Management

NEWS TRIGGER

Cadre-review and promotion-quota disputes between state cadres and the Centre recur whenever AIS vacancies are filled largely through direct recruitment.

INTRO & ORIGIN

AIS recruitment blends direct entry (via UPSC) with promotion from state civil services, linking the state cadre to the all-India cadre and giving state officers an upward route into the AIS.

The promotion quota is capped so that direct recruits still form the majority of senior AIS posts, preserving the all-India, uniformly trained character of these services.

FILLING SENIOR AIS POSTS

Promotion from state service (max)

33.33

Direct recruitment (minimum share)

66.67

Up to 33⅓% of senior AIS posts may be filled by promotion; the rest remain direct recruits.

STATIC THEORY

- Promotion from state services to the AIS is capped at up to 33⅓% of senior posts, not an unlimited proportion.
- A UPSC-chaired selection committee reviews eligible state officers before promotion into the AIS.
- This structure keeps direct recruitment dominant, preserving common training and an all-India outlook among senior officers.
- The promotion route is one of the few formal channels connecting state cadre careers to the all-India services.

MEMORY HOOK

33⅓% promotion CAP, not a target — direct recruits remain the majority.

MUST-KNOW FACTS

1. Up to 33⅓% of senior AIS posts can be filled by promotion from state services.
2. A UPSC-chaired selection committee oversees this promotion process.

UPSC TRAPS

WRONG: AIS officers are recruited only through promotion from state cadres.

CORRECT: The AIS is primarily filled by direct recruitment through UPSC; promotion fills only a capped minority of senior posts.

MAINS ANGLE

Use the promotion quota to discuss how the AIS balances a uniformly trained all-India cadre with a genuine career path for meritorious state-service officers.

MEDIUM7. Citizens' Charter and the Sevottam Model

GS-II Polity -
Administrative
Accountability

NEWS TRIGGER

Complaints about poor service delivery in government offices keep the Citizens' Charter and the Sevottam framework relevant to every discussion on responsive administration.

INTRO & ORIGIN

A Citizens' Charter is a public statement by a service-providing department of the services it offers, timelines, standards and grievance channels, so citizens know what to expect and whom to hold accountable.

The 2nd Administrative Reforms Commission backed the Sevottam model as the framework for citizen-centric administration, standardising service delivery, grievance redress and delivery capability.

KEY DATA

Sevottam Component	Meaning
Citizen's Charter	Standards and commitments made visible
Grievance redress	Complaint handling and accountability loop
Service delivery capability	Process, staff and infrastructure improvements

STATIC THEORY

- A Citizens' Charter publicly states services, timelines, standards, grievance channels and responsible officials.
- The Sevottam model organises citizen-centric administration around three pillars: the Charter, grievance redress, and service delivery capability.
- A Charter is generally non-justiciable unless a separate law or service-guarantee statute makes a specific promise legally enforceable.

MEMORY HOOK

Sevottam = CHARTER + GRIEVANCE REDRESS + DELIVERY CAPABILITY.

MUST-KNOW FACTS

1. The 2nd ARC's citizen-centric administration report backed the Sevottam model.
2. A Citizens' Charter is generally non-justiciable unless enforced by a separate statute.

UPSC TRAPS

WRONG: A Citizens' Charter is automatically a legally enforceable right.

CORRECT: It is an administrative accountability tool; enforceability needs a separate law or service-guarantee statute.

MAINS ANGLE

Evaluate whether voluntary Citizens' Charters achieve genuine accountability, or whether statutory service-guarantee acts (as in several states) are needed to make commitments enforceable.

MEDIUM8. e-Governance: G2C, G2B, G2G and G2E

GS-II Polity -
Administrative
Reform

NEWS TRIGGER

Digital India, DBT, UMANG and DigiLocker are cited whenever e-governance is discussed as a tool for transparent, citizen-centric service delivery.

INTRO & ORIGIN

e-Governance is the use of information and communication technology to make government services faster, more transparent and citizen-centric, spanning four distinct flows of interaction.

The 2nd Administrative Reforms Commission treated e-governance as a governance reform in its own right — not merely computerisation of existing manual processes.

THE FOUR FLOWS OF E-GOVERNANCE

STATIC THEORY

- e-Governance covers four flows: G2C, G2B, G2G and G2E, each with distinct examples and objectives.
- The 2nd ARC framed e-governance as process re-engineering combined with accountability, not just digitisation.
- Responsive administration links transparency, technology and citizen participation as mutually reinforcing goals.

MEMORY HOOK

G2C-CITIZEN | G2B-BUSINESS | G2G-GOVERNMENT | G2E-EMPLOYEE.

MUST-KNOW FACTS

1. Digital India, DBT, UMANG and DigiLocker are verified examples of G2C service delivery.
2. The 2nd ARC treated e-governance as a governance reform, not merely computerisation.

UPSC TRAPS

WRONG: Digitising an existing manual process is enough to count as e-governance reform.

CORRECT: e-Governance requires process re-engineering and accountability, not just digitising a bad process.

MAINS ANGLE

Use the G2C/G2B/G2G/G2E framework to argue that e-governance succeeds only when it re-engineers processes for accountability, not when it merely automates paperwork.

10. Comparisons: Doctrine of Pleasure vs Article 311 Safeguards

GS-II Polity -
Comparative
Analysis

NEWS TRIGGER

Disciplinary controversies routinely confuse the President's/Governor's 'pleasure' with the procedural safeguards that actually constrain it — a frequent source of exam traps.

INTRO & ORIGIN

Article 310 and Article 311 look like they conflict, but they are complementary: one sets the general rule of tenure, the other is the specific constitutional exception that regulates how that rule is exercised.

This relationship is a classic 'general provision vs specific exception' structure that recurs across the Constitution wherever a broad executive power is paired with a procedural check.

DOCTRINE OF PLEASURE VS ARTICLE 311 SAFEGUARDS

Doctrine of Pleasure (Art 310)

- General rule: no fixed tenure
- Applies to all civil posts
- Historically absolute in Britain

Govern civil servant tenure

- Both operate together, not separately
- Both are justiciable

Article 311 Safeguards

- Specific exception to Art 310
- Requires inquiry & hearing
- Only 3 situations dispense with inquiry

Article 311 does not replace Article 310 — it conditions how the pleasure power may be exercised.

STATIC THEORY

- Article 310 supplies the default rule (tenure at pleasure); Article 311 supplies the mandatory procedure that must be followed before that pleasure results in dismissal, removal or reduction in rank.
- Neither article is redundant: without 310, tenure would need to be separately fixed by statute; without 311, pleasure would be an unchecked power.
- Courts read the two articles together, treating 311 as carving out due-process requirements from the general pleasure doctrine.

MEMORY HOOK

310 = GENERAL RULE | 311 = SPECIFIC EXCEPTION that regulates it.

MUST-KNOW FACTS

1. Article 310 is the general tenure rule; Article 311 is the specific procedural safeguard.
2. Both articles must be read together for any question on civil-service dismissal.

UPSC TRAPS

WRONG: Articles 310 and 311 are unrelated, independent provisions.

CORRECT: Article 311 is a specific safeguard that conditions the general pleasure doctrine in Article 310.

MAINS ANGLE

Use the general-rule/specific-exception framing to answer any question that asks you to 'reconcile' Articles 310 and 311.
