E SUBORDINATE ENRICHMENT — ONLY AFTER THE COMPLETE CORE

EXTRA · OPTIONAL ADVANCED ENRICHMENT · DADABHAI NAOROJI ARGUED THAT INDIA WAS POOR NOT BECAUSE · R.C. DUTT LINKED REVENUE PRESSURE, FREE TRADE, FAMINES AND · DRAIN OCCURRED THROUGH HOME CHARGES , REMITTANCES OF OFFICIALS, · PROFITS, INTEREST PAYMENTS AND MILITARY EXPENDITURE CHARGED TO INDIAN · THE DRAIN THEORY WAS MORE THAN A BUDGET CALCULATION · IT WAS AN IDEOLOGICAL WEAPON THAT GAVE EARLY NATIONALISM · MODERATE NATIONALISM USED ECONOMIC CRITIQUE TO SHOW THAT POVERTY

OPTIONAL SOURCE DEPTH
- Dadabhai Naoroji argued that India was poor not because of climate or culture but because colonial rule transferred wealth abroad without return.
- R.C. Dutt linked revenue pressure, free trade, famines and deindustrialisation into a systematic critique of British economic policy.
- Drain occurred through home charges , remittances of officials, salaries, pensions,
- profits, interest payments and military expenditure charged to Indian revenues.

ADVANCED DEBATE
- CAUTION: The drain theory was more than a budget calculation
- it was an ideological weapon that gave early nationalism a rational, empirical and all-India grievance.
- CAUTION: Moderate nationalism used economic critique to show that poverty was
- politically produced, thereby connecting elite constitutional politics with mass material suffering.

LEGACY / NUANCE
- Indian handicrafts declined under pressure from British machine-made imports, discriminatory tariff policy and the loss of traditional patronage.
- Deindustrialisation pushed artisans toward land, intensifying rural pressure and making agriculture absorb population without corresponding productivity growth.
- Commercialisation of agriculture connected peasants to global markets through cash crops such as
- indigo and cotton, but often increased vulnerability to price shocks and coercive intermediaries.

OPTIONAL STATUS — This optional depth is unnecessary for a competent core answer; use it only for added nuance after the complete core has been written.
