Polity 28 - UPSC and SPSC - PYQ, practice and solved workbook

[FACT] This H2 deliberately begins the practice material so that markdown_learning_pdf.py --mode workbook extracts the complete solved workbook and stops before the final consolidated register notes.

[FACT] The recent local routing ledgers and integration audits for 2018-2023, 2024-2025 and 2026 were searched precisely for Public Service Commission, Article 315, Article 320, SPSC and Joint State Public Service Commission.

[LIMIT] No direct standalone UPSC Prelims or GS-II Mains PYQ on the UPSC/SPSC constitutional architecture was verified in those routed ledgers. Therefore, this package does not manufacture an official question, year, wording or key.

[LIMIT] Adjacent verified questions on civil-service reform, ethos of civil services, administrative tribunals, district-judge recruitment and bank-chair selection remain with their audited Governance, Public Services, Judiciary, Tribunal or Economy owners. They are not relabelled as PSC PYQs merely because recruitment is an adjacent concept.

Original solved Mains practice

M1. Article 317 does not provide one uniform removal process for every allegation against a Public Service Commission member. Explain. (10 marks, 150 words)

Model solution

Thesis: [FACT] Article 317 centralises final removal in the President but differentiates misbehaviour from three direct constitutional grounds; [ANALYSIS] that distinction combines tenure security with workable incapacity and conflict controls.

Misbehaviour: [FACT] Under clause (1), the President refers the allegation to the Supreme Court, which conducts an inquiry under the Article 145 procedure and reports whether the member ought to be removed. [FACT] Clause (4) deems prohibited interest in a government contract to be misbehaviour.

Direct grounds: [FACT] Clause (3) allows Presidential removal for adjudged insolvency, paid employment outside office, or unfitness due to infirmity of mind or body without using the separate clause (1) inquiry route.

Suspension: [FACT] Once reference is made, the President may suspend a UPSC/Joint Commission member, while the Governor may suspend an SPSC member, until the President acts on the Court's report.

Qualification: [LIMIT] The Governor never finally removes an SPSC member, and Parliament's judicial-address procedure is inapplicable.

Verdict: Article 317 protects against retaliatory removal without making the office incapable of responding to objective disqualification or incapacity.

Outstanding-answer test: It names all four clauses, distinguishes removal from suspension and avoids importing "impeachment".

M2. Public Service Commission advice is non-binding, yet constitutionally consequential.

Comment. (10 marks, 150 words)

Model solution

Thesis: [FACT] Article 320 creates a constitutional consultation voice rather than a veto; [ANALYSIS] its consequence arises from expertise, convention and public accountability.

Scope: [FACT] Consultation covers recruitment methods, appointment/promotion/transfer principles and suitability, disciplinary matters, official-duty legal-cost claims and injury pensions. This gives the Commission structured access before important personnel decisions.

Legal limit: [FACT] State of U.P. v. Manbodhan Lal Srivastava held Article 320(3) directory, so non-consultation does not automatically invalidate executive action. Valid regulations may also specify consultation exceptions.

Accountability: [FACT] Article 323 requires annual reports and memoranda explaining cases and reasons where advice was not accepted. [ANALYSIS] Rejection thus becomes capable of legislative and public scrutiny.

Qualification: [LIMIT] Directory does not mean dispensable at will; arbitrariness, mala fides and rule violations remain reviewable.

Verdict: The Commission influences by reason and disclosure, not command—a soft legal power strengthened by hard reporting duties.

Outstanding-answer test: It links Articles 320 and 323 and states Manbodhan Lal without saying advice is meaningless.

M3. A Joint State Public Service Commission is neither purely statutory nor automatically created by the Constitution. Clarify. (10 marks, 150 words)

Model solution

Thesis: [FACT] Article 315(2) supplies the constitutional design, while a parliamentary law after State legislative resolutions supplies the operational creating instrument.

Constitutional foundation: Two or more States may agree to a common Commission. Each relevant House—or each House in a bicameral State—must pass the resolution contemplated by Article 315(2).

Statutory activation: Parliament may then by law provide for appointment and incidental/consequential matters. [FACT] The President appoints its Chair/members under Article 316, regulates it under Article 318 and may suspend its member after an Article 317 reference.

Distinctions: [FACT] It differs from UPSC serving a State under Article 315(4) and from UPSC assistance for a joint recruitment scheme under Article 320(2).

Qualification: [LIMIT] Calling it merely "statutory" can hide its constitutional status; calling it self-executing ignores the required law.

Verdict: It is best described as a constitutionally authorised common Commission instantiated by parliamentary statute through State consent.

Outstanding-answer test: It separates source, trigger, law, appointing authority and two neighbouring devices.

M4. Examine the constitutional safeguards and practical limits of UPSC/SPSC independence. (15 marks, 250 words)

Model solution

Thesis: [ANALYSIS] PSC independence is strongest at removal and finance but incomplete across the institutional lifecycle; appointment quality, staff, technology and compliance conventions determine whether constitutional insulation becomes practical autonomy.

Constitutional safeguards

1. [FACT] Article 315 creates the Commissions directly and prevents ordinary executive abolition of their core.
2. [FACT] Article 316 fixes six-year/age-limited tenure, reducing pleasure-based insecurity.
3. [FACT] Article 317 reserves final removal to the President and subjects misbehaviour to Supreme Court inquiry.
4. [FACT] Article 318 bars disadvantageous variation of member service conditions.
5. [FACT] Article 319 narrows post-office government employment, reducing favour-seeking.
6. [FACT] Article 322 charges UPSC/SPSC expenditure on the relevant Consolidated Fund.
7. [FACT] Article 323 requires reporting and reasons for rejected advice.

Practical limits

- [FACT] President/Governor appoint members without an adopted constitutional collegium.
- [FACT] Article 320 advice is generally non-binding after Manbodhan Lal.
- [ANALYSIS] Executive control over staff, technology procurement and timely vacancies can weaken an otherwise protected body.
- [ANALYSIS] SPSC quality may vary with local political networks, secretariat capacity and examination-security systems.

Counterpoint: [ANALYSIS] Binding advice on every matter could transfer democratic personnel responsibility to an unelected commission.

Reforms: publish appointment criteria and conflicts, fill vacancies predictably, strengthen rule-based staff and cyber capacity, improve speaking grievance decisions, and ensure legislative committees examine Article 323 memoranda.

Qualification: [LIMIT] No speculative collegium should be presented as current law.

Verdict: The Constitution protects the Commission from dismissal; governance reform must protect it from dependence, delay and distrust.

Outstanding-answer test: It uses at least five exact Articles, presents both institutional case and democratic limit, and offers implementable reforms.

M5. Courts review Public Service Commission selections, but they do not sit as appellate selection boards. Analyse. (15 marks, 250 words)

Model solution

Thesis: [FACT] Judicial review protects Articles 14 and 16, statutory rules and procedural fairness; [ANALYSIS] judicial restraint simultaneously protects expert comparative assessment.

Reviewable defects

- [FACT] Ashok Kumar Yadav demonstrates that PSC selection remains reviewable for bias and arbitrary interview design.
- [FACT] K. Manjusree invalidated a minimum interview benchmark introduced after the process.
- [CURRENT] Tej Prakash Pathak, 2024 INSC 847, Constitution Bench, reaffirms stability of eligibility/selection rules unless the governing framework permits a lawful, non-arbitrary change.
- [FACT] Mala fides, unequal treatment, ineligible decision-makers and serious statutory-rule violations remain review grounds.

Restraint

[FACT] M.V. Thimmaiah v. UPSC states that courts ordinarily do not act as appellate authorities over expert recommendations; review is exceptional for mala fides or serious rule breach.

Appointment boundary

[FACT] Shankarsan Dash denies an indefeasible appointment right merely from select-list inclusion. Yet government cannot arbitrarily refuse appointment or selectively apply its decision.

Institutional reason: [ANALYSIS] Judges are equipped to decide legality, not to reconstruct specialist scoring, interviews and service suitability.

Qualification: [LIMIT] "Expert opinion" cannot shield conflict of interest, undisclosed criteria or discrimination.

Verdict: The correct line is merit deference with legality control: courts do not choose candidates, but they ensure the State chooses by known, equal and lawful rules.

Outstanding-answer test: It gives four named cases with propositions and distinguishes selection, recommendation and appointment.

M6. Examination integrity requires more than criminal punishment. Discuss with reference to the Public Examinations framework and PSC governance. (15 marks, 250 words)

Model solution

Thesis: [CURRENT] The Public Examinations Act and Rules, 2024 add a strong anti-unfair-means framework; [ANALYSIS] deterrence succeeds only when joined to prevention, detection, transparent remedy and institutional capacity.

Legal layer

[FACT] The Act's Schedule expressly covers UPSC examinations. Section 3 includes leakage, unauthorised access/assistance, answer-sheet and assessment tampering, security/network manipulation, fake sites, fake exams and fake offer letters. Offences are cognizable, non-bailable and non-compoundable; service-provider and organised-crime liability addresses systemic wrongdoing.

Preventive layer

[CURRENT] Rule 5 contemplates CBT standards for centres, nodes, servers, networks, platforms, readiness audits, biometrics, security, question loading, invigilation and post-exam checks. Rule 9 requires implementation monitoring.

Governance layer

- segment question access and retain audit logs;
- independently test high-risk digital systems and vendors;
- publish stable criteria, calendars and prompt reasons for delay;
- provide accessible grievance and answer-key/result representation channels;
- prepare continuity/re-examination protocols that protect innocent candidates.

Qualification: [LIMIT] Maximum secrecy can conceal weak governance; maximum disclosure can reveal attack surfaces. Privacy, disability accommodation and natural justice must remain intact.

Verdict: Criminal law punishes the breach; trustworthy PSC design prevents it, detects it early and gives candidates a lawful remedy.

Outstanding-answer test: It names the Act's UPSC Schedule, verified Rules and a full prevent-detect-report-remedy cycle.

M7. “The SPSC is State-rooted but Union-insulated.” Evaluate this federal design and suggest reforms. (20 marks, 300 words)

Model solution

Thesis: [FACT] The Governor appoints SPSC members and receives their annual report, while the President alone removes them; [ANALYSIS] this asymmetry combines State recruitment ownership with protection from immediate State executive retaliation.

State-rooted elements

1. [FACT] Article 315 provides an SPSC for each State.
2. [FACT] The Governor appoints the Chair and members under Article 316.
3. [FACT] The Governor determines membership/staff conditions by regulations under Article 318.
4. [FACT] The SPSC recruits for State services and reports to the Governor under Article 323.
5. [FACT] The State legislature receives the report and non-acceptance memorandum.

Union-insulated elements

1. [FACT] Only the President removes an SPSC member under Article 317.
2. [FACT] Misbehaviour requires Supreme Court inquiry.
3. [FACT] The State government cannot use removal simply because advice is inconvenient.
4. [FACT] The constitutional age/tenure, service-condition and post-office rules limit local executive control.

Federal flexibility

[FACT] States may seek a Joint Commission through resolutions and parliamentary law, use UPSC assistance under Article 315(4), or request joint-scheme help under Article 320(2).

Problems

[ANALYSIS] Executive appointment dominance, vacancies, local conflicts, weak vendor/security capacity, shifting criteria and poor grievance systems can defeat formal insulation. Presidential removal is a last-resort safeguard, not daily quality assurance.

Reforms

- publish qualification, integrity and conflict criteria for appointments;
- create predictable appointment/vacancy calendars;
- professionalise permanent secretariats and digital-security cells;
- adopt national-conference standards while preserving State adaptation;
- publish reasons, marks/cut-offs and grievance outcomes within law;
- strengthen legislative committee scrutiny of Article 323 reports.

Qualification: [LIMIT] A Union-controlled appointment system would over-correct the State problem and weaken federal ownership; no adopted collegium should be assumed.

Verdict: The design wisely separates State connection from State removal control. Its unfinished task is to add transparent appointment and operational capacity to constitutional tenure security.

Outstanding-answer test: It evaluates both federal poles, uses Articles 315-323 and rejects both centralisation and local capture.

M8. Critically examine whether lateral recruitment is inconsistent with the constitutional role of the UPSC and the equality code in public employment. (20 marks, 300 words)

Model solution

Thesis: [FACT] Lateral recruitment is not per se unconstitutional and UPSC has no monopoly over every post; [ANALYSIS] legality depends on post-specific recruitment rules, consultation requirements, Articles 14 and 16, reservation, transparent criteria and non-arbitrary selection.

Why it may be legitimate

- [FACT] Article 309 permits recruitment and service conditions to be regulated by law/rules.
- [FACT] Article 320 envisages examinations and consultation but also constitutionally permits exemption regulations.
- [ANALYSIS] Specialist, time-bound or scarce-skill posts may justify direct selection, deputation or contract where rules authorise it.
- [ANALYSIS] An independent expert/UPSC role can strengthen credibility even when a competitive generalist examination is unsuitable.

Constitutional concerns

- bypassing a valid consultation requirement;
- vague or tailored eligibility criteria;
- changing benchmarks after applications;
- inadequate advertisement and conflict disclosure;
- arbitrary shortlisting/interview;
- evasion rather than lawful application of reservation/equal-opportunity rules;
- repeated temporary hiring that replaces rule-bound career structures.

Current regulatory nuance

[CURRENT] G.S.R. 203(E), 15 March 2024, exempts specified Group A/B posts up to level 13A filled through named deputation/re-employment, short-term-contract, absorption or composite modes. [LIMIT] It is not a blanket “lateral entry exemption”; higher/different posts require their own legal analysis.

Judicial control

[FACT] K. Manjusree and Tej Prakash Pathak require stable criteria; M.V. Thimmaiah supports merit deference subject to legality; Shankarsan Dash denies an automatic appointment right but not equality review.

Reform design

Publish a post-wise skills gap, recruitment rule and reservation position; use wide notice; pre-declare scoring and conflicts; include independent expertise; record reasons; cap tenure with evaluation; publish aggregate outcomes; preserve review.

Qualification: [LIMIT] Neither “all expertise lies outside government” nor “only career examination creates merit” is defensible.
