

SOLVED PRACTICE WORKBOOK

Minorities: Rights and Welfare - Learner-v2 Refreshed

UPSC complete learning session | Foundation to advanced | Concepts, evidence, practice and answer writing

Original deterministic study visual; labels are explanatory, not textual quotations.

Source order: repository knowledge -> official current linkage -> clearly marked analysis. No fabricated PYQs or statistics.

CONTENTS / WORKBOOK INDEX

Major learning parts and meaningful subtopics are listed in document order. Page numbers are generated from the final PDF layout; PDF bookmarks mirror the same hierarchy.

Minorities: Rights and Welfare - Solved Practice Workbook 6

BASIC MCQS / REMEDIATION 6

Q1. Which statement correctly identifies What this owner holds and why its previous-year record is stated as zero?	6
Q2. Which chronology card should be filed under What this owner holds and why its previous-year record is stated as zero?	7
Q3. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of What this owner holds and why its previous-year record is stated as zero?	7
Q4. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about What this owner holds and why its previous-year record is stated as zero?	8
Q5. Which statement correctly identifies The constitutional bank for a minority answer?	9
Q6. Which chronology card should be filed under The constitutional bank for a minority answer?	10
Q7. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The constitutional bank for a minority answer?	10
Q8. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The constitutional bank for a minority answer?	11
Q9. Which statement correctly identifies The centrally notified minority communities and the notifying provision?	12
Q10. Which chronology card should be filed under The centrally notified minority communities and the notifying provision?	12
Q11. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The centrally notified minority communities and the notifying provision?	13
Q12. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The centrally notified minority communities and the notifying provision?	14
Q13. Which statement correctly identifies The commission for minorities is statutory and not constitutional?	14
Q14. Which chronology card should be filed under The commission for minorities is statutory and not constitutional?	15
Q15. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The commission for minorities is statutory and not constitutional?	16
Q16. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The commission for minorities is statutory and not constitutional?	16
Q17. Which statement correctly identifies Composition, mandate and the limit of an advisory body?	17
Q18. Which chronology card should be filed under Composition, mandate and the limit of an advisory body?	18
Q19. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Composition, mandate and the limit of an advisory body?	18
Q20. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Composition, mandate and the limit of an advisory body?	19
Q21. Which statement correctly identifies Minority status is determined at the State level?	20
Q22. Which chronology card should be filed under Minority status is determined at the State level?	21
Q23. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Minority status is determined at the State level?	21
Q24. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Minority status is determined at the State level?	22

Q25. Which statement correctly identifies Article 30 covers religious and linguistic minorities alike?	23
Q26. Which chronology card should be filed under Article 30 covers religious and linguistic minorities alike?	24
Q27. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Article 30 covers religious and linguistic minorities alike?	24
Q28. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Article 30 covers religious and linguistic minorities alike?	25
Q29. Which statement correctly identifies The specialised minority-education statute of 2004?	26
Q30. Which chronology card should be filed under The specialised minority-education statute of 2004?	26
Q31. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The specialised minority-education statute of 2004?	27
Q32. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The specialised minority-education statute of 2004?	28
Q33. Which statement correctly identifies The ministry's own account of the umbrella livelihood scheme?	28
Q34. Which chronology card should be filed under The ministry's own account of the umbrella livelihood scheme?	29
Q35. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The ministry's own account of the umbrella livelihood scheme?	30
Q36. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The ministry's own account of the umbrella livelihood scheme?	31
Q37. Which statement correctly identifies What the umbrella merged and what it is not?	32
Q38. Which chronology card should be filed under What the umbrella merged and what it is not?	32
Q39. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of What the umbrella merged and what it is not?	33
Q40. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about What the umbrella merged and what it is not?	34
Q41. Which statement correctly identifies Area targeting is a different instrument from capability support?	34
Q42. Which chronology card should be filed under Area targeting is a different instrument from capability support?	35
Q43. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Area targeting is a different instrument from capability support?	36
Q44. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Area targeting is a different instrument from capability support?	36
Q45. Which statement correctly identifies Scholarship names are annual notifications and not permanent entitlements?	37
Q46. Which chronology card should be filed under Scholarship names are annual notifications and not permanent entitlements?	38
Q47. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Scholarship names are annual notifications and not permanent entitlements?	38
Q48. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Scholarship names are annual notifications and not permanent entitlements?	39
Q49. Which statement correctly identifies What a waqf is and who administers it?	40
Q50. Which chronology card should be filed under What a waqf is and who administers it?	40
Q51. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of What a waqf is and who administers it?	41
Q52. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about What a waqf is and who administers it?	42
Q53. Which statement correctly identifies Waqf by deed and waqf by user?	42
Q54. Which chronology card should be filed under Waqf by deed and waqf by user?	43

Q55. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Waqf by deed and waqf by user?	44
Q56. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Waqf by deed and waqf by user?	44
Q57. Which statement correctly identifies The amending Act of 2025 and its enactment?	45
Q58. Which chronology card should be filed under The amending Act of 2025 and its enactment?	46
Q59. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The amending Act of 2025 and its enactment?	46
Q60. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The amending Act of 2025 and its enactment?	47
Q61. Which statement correctly identifies What the interim order of 15 September 2025 stayed?	48
Q62. Which chronology card should be filed under What the interim order of 15 September 2025 stayed?	48
Q63. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of What the interim order of 15 September 2025 stayed?	49
Q64. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about What the interim order of 15 September 2025 stayed?	50
Q65. Which statement correctly identifies What the same order refused to stay and what it capped?	51
Q66. Which chronology card should be filed under What the same order refused to stay and what it capped?	51
Q67. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of What the same order refused to stay and what it capped?	52
Q68. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about What the same order refused to stay and what it capped?	53
Q69. Which statement correctly identifies An interim arrangement is not a final constitutional ruling?	54
Q70. Which chronology card should be filed under An interim arrangement is not a final constitutional ruling?	54
Q71. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of An interim arrangement is not a final constitutional ruling?	55
Q72. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about An interim arrangement is not a final constitutional ruling?	56
Q73. Which statement correctly identifies The Sachar diagnosis and the outcome-measurement gap?	57
Q74. Which chronology card should be filed under The Sachar diagnosis and the outcome-measurement gap?	57
Q75. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The Sachar diagnosis and the outcome-measurement gap?	58
Q76. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The Sachar diagnosis and the outcome-measurement gap?	59
Q77. Which statement correctly identifies The transparent ownership statement for this owner?	60
Q78. Which chronology card should be filed under The transparent ownership statement for this owner?	60
Q79. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The transparent ownership statement for this owner?	61
Q80. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The transparent ownership statement for this owner?	62

PYQS AND ANSWER PRACTICE 63

TRANSPARENT ZERO-DIRECT-PYQ AUDIT	63
OWNER PYQ LEDGER EXTRACTS	63
ORIGINAL MAINS 1 - 10 MARKS	63
ORIGINAL MAINS 2 - 10 MARKS	64
ORIGINAL MAINS 3 - 15 MARKS	65

ORIGINAL MAINS 4 - 15 MARKS 66

ORIGINAL MAINS 5 - 20 MARKS 67

ORIGINAL MAINS 6 - 20 MARKS 67

Minorities: Rights and Welfare - Solved Practice Workbook

BASIC MCQS / REMEDIATION

Q1. Which statement correctly identifies What this owner holds and why its previous-year record is stated as zero?

A. This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here. B. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. C. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. D. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around.

Answer: A. Explanation: This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q2. Which chronology card should be filed under What this owner holds and why its previous-year record is stated as zero?

A. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. B. This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here. C. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. D. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around.

Answer: B. Explanation: This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q3. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of What this owner holds and why its previous-year record is stated as zero?

A. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. B. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. C.

This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here. D. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination.

Answer: C. Explanation: This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q4. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about What this owner holds and why its previous-year record is stated as zero?

A. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. B. The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. C. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination. D. This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here.

Answer: D. Explanation: This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q5. Which statement correctly identifies The constitutional bank for a minority answer?

A. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. B. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around. C. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. D. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q6. Which chronology card should be filed under The constitutional bank for a minority answer?

A. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. B. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. C. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. D. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q7. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The constitutional bank for a minority answer?

A. The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. B. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. C. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. D. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q8. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The constitutional bank for a minority answer?

A. The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. B. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. C. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination. D. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q9. Which statement correctly identifies The centrally notified minority communities and the notifying provision?

A. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around. B. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. C. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination. D. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(d) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q10. Which chronology card should be filed under The centrally notified minority communities and the notifying provision?

A. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination. B. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around. C. The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. D. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(a) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q11. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The centrally notified minority communities and the notifying provision?

A. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. B. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination. C. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around. D. The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q12. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The centrally notified minority communities and the notifying provision?

A. The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. B. The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. C. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. D. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(b) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q13. Which statement correctly identifies The commission for minorities is statutory and not constitutional?

A. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. B. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. C.

The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. D. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination.

Answer: A. Explanation: The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q14. Which chronology card should be filed under The commission for minorities is statutory and not constitutional?

A. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. B. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. C. The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. D. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination.

Answer: B. Explanation: The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q15. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The commission for minorities is statutory and not constitutional?

A. The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. B. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. C. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. D. The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry.

Answer: C. Explanation: The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q16. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The commission for minorities is statutory and not constitutional?

A. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. B. The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur

Kamau, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. C. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. D. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it.

Answer: D. Explanation: The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q17. Which statement correctly identifies Composition, mandate and the limit of an advisory body?

A. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. B. The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. C. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination. D. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q18. Which chronology card should be filed under Composition, mandate and the limit of an advisory body?

A. The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. B. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. C. The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. D. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q19. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Composition, mandate and the limit of an advisory body?

A. The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. B. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. C. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. D. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q20. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Composition, mandate and the limit of an advisory body?

A. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. B. The Pradhan Mantri Virsat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. C. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. D. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q21. Which statement correctly identifies Minority status is determined at the State level?

A. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination. B. The Pradhan Mantri Virsat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. C. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. D. The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q22. Which chronology card should be filed under Minority status is determined at the State level?

A. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. B. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination. C. The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. D. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q23. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Minority status is determined at the State level?

A. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. B. The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. C. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination. D. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q24. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Minority status is determined at the State level?

A. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject. B. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. C. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. D. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q25. Which statement correctly identifies Article 30 covers religious and linguistic minorities alike?

A. The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. B. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. C. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. D. The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q26. Which chronology card should be filed under Article 30 covers religious and linguistic minorities alike?

A. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. B. The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. C. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. D. The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q27. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Article 30 covers religious and linguistic minorities alike?

A. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. B. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. C. The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. D. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q28. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Article 30 covers religious and linguistic minorities alike?

A. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject. B. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. C. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. D. The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q29. Which statement correctly identifies The specialised minority-education statute of 2004?

A. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. B. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. C. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. D. The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q30. Which chronology card should be filed under The specialised minority-education statute of 2004?

A. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. B. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. C. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject. D. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q31. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The specialised minority-education statute of 2004?

A. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. B. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. C. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. D. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q32. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The specialised minority-education statute of 2004?

A. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject. B. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. C. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. D. The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q33. Which statement correctly identifies The ministry's own account of the umbrella livelihood scheme?

A. The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. B. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. C. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject. D. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless.

Answer: A. Explanation: The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q34. Which chronology card should be filed under The ministry's own account of the umbrella livelihood scheme?

A. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. B. The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. C. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. D. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject.

Answer: B. Explanation: The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q35. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The ministry's own account of the umbrella livelihood scheme?

A. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. B. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject. C. The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. D. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems.

Answer: C. Explanation: The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q36. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The ministry's own account of the umbrella livelihood scheme?

A. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. B. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly. C. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. D. The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted.

Answer: D. Explanation: The Pradhan Mantri Virasat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q37. Which statement correctly identifies What the umbrella merged and what it is not?

A. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. B. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject. C. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. D. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q38. Which chronology card should be filed under What the umbrella merged and what it is not?

A. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. B. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. C. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. D. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q39. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of What the umbrella merged and what it is not?

A. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly. B. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. C. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. D. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q40. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about What the umbrella merged and what it is not?

A. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. B. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly. C. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive. D. The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q41. Which statement correctly identifies Area targeting is a different instrument from capability support?

A. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. B. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. C. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. D. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q42. Which chronology card should be filed under Area targeting is a different instrument from capability support?

A. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. B. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. C. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly. D. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q43. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Area targeting is a different instrument from capability support?

A. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. B. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly. C. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. D. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q44. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Area targeting is a different instrument from capability support?

A. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive. B. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. C. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly. D. The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q45. Which statement correctly identifies Scholarship names are annual notifications and not permanent entitlements?

A. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject. B. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly. C. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. D. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q46. Which chronology card should be filed under Scholarship names are annual notifications and not permanent entitlements?

A. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. B. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject. C. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive. D. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q47. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Scholarship names are annual notifications and not permanent entitlements?

A. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. B. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly. C. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject. D. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q48. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Scholarship names are annual notifications and not permanent entitlements?

A. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive. B. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. C. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis. D. The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q49. Which statement correctly identifies What a waqf is and who administers it?

A. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. B. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive. C. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. D. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly.

Answer: A. Explanation: A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q50. Which chronology card should be filed under What a waqf is and who administers it?

A. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive. B. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. C. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. D. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly.

Answer: B. Explanation: A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q51. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of What a waqf is and who administers it?

A. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. B. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive. C. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. D. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis.

Answer: C. Explanation: A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q52. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about What a waqf is and who administers it?

A. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis. B. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. C. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. D. A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems.

Answer: D. Explanation: A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q53. Which statement correctly identifies Waqf by deed and waqf by user?

A. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. B. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive. C. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. D. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q54. Which chronology card should be filed under Waqf by deed and waqf by user?

A. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis. B. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. C. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. D. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q55. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Waqf by deed and waqf by user?

A. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. B. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis. C. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. D. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q56. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Waqf by deed and waqf by user?

A. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. B. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis. C. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. D. The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners distinguish two ways in which a property becomes waqf: waqf by deed, which is a formal documented dedication, and waqf by user, which is a claim resting on long uninterrupted use for religious or charitable purposes without formal documentation, and they record that the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025 prospectively abolishes waqf by user for future claims; the distinction is examinable because the undocumented route is precisely where disputed claims against government land arise, so the reform and the litigation both turn on it and an answer that omits the distinction cannot explain either. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q57. Which statement correctly identifies The amending Act of 2025 and its enactment?

A. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly. B. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis. C. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. D. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q58. Which chronology card should be filed under The amending Act of 2025 and its enactment?

A. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. B. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly. C. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. D. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q59. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The amending Act of 2025 and its enactment?

A. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis. B. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. C. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly. D. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q60. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The amending Act of 2025 and its enactment?

A. This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here. B. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. C. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. D. The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q61. Which statement correctly identifies What the interim order of 15 September 2025 stayed?

A. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive. B. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis. C. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. D. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q62. Which chronology card should be filed under What the interim order of 15 September 2025 stayed?

A. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. B. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive. C. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. D. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q63. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of What the interim order of 15 September 2025 stayed?

A. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. B. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. C. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive. D. This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q64. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about What the interim order of 15 September 2025 stayed?

A. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. B. This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here. C. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. D. The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q65. Which statement correctly identifies What the same order refused to stay and what it capped?

A. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. B. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. C. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. D. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q66. Which chronology card should be filed under What the same order refused to stay and what it capped?

A. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. B. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. C. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. D. This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q67. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of What the same order refused to stay and what it capped?

A. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. B. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. C. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. D. This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q68. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about What the same order refused to stay and what it capped?

A. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around. B. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. C. This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here. D. The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act. The remaining options belong to different chronology, Q69. Which statement correctly identifies An interim arrangement is not a final constitutional ruling?

A. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis. B. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. C. This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here. D. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q70. Which chronology card should be filed under An interim arrangement is not a final constitutional ruling?

A. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. B. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis. C. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. D. This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q71. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of An interim arrangement is not a final constitutional ruling?

A. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around. B. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. C. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis. D. This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q72. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about An interim arrangement is not a final constitutional ruling?

A. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around. B. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. C. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. D. The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q73. Which statement correctly identifies The Sachar diagnosis and the outcome-measurement gap?

A. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. B. This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here. C. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. D. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery.

Answer: A. Explanation: The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q74. Which chronology card should be filed under The Sachar diagnosis and the outcome-measurement gap?

A. This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here. B. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. C. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around. D. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery.

Answer: B. Explanation: The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q75. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The Sachar diagnosis and the outcome-measurement gap?

A. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around. B. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. C. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. D. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it.

Answer: C. Explanation: The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q76. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The Sachar diagnosis and the outcome-measurement gap?

A. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around. B. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. C. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. D. The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation.

Answer: D. Explanation: The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q77. Which statement correctly identifies The transparent ownership statement for this owner?

A. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. B. This owner holds the minority half of the rights-and-welfare argument: the constitutional cultural and educational guarantees, the statutory commission that monitors them, the notified list of minority communities, the pan-India livelihood and skilling umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry, the area-development route that is often confused with it, and the endowment-administration statute whose 2025 amendment is currently before the Supreme Court; its distinctive feature is that the audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to it for the covered years, so the zero is stated openly here, and the nearest neighbouring demand, the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, is routed by the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Polity commissions owner and is therefore not claimed here. C. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. D. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around.

Answer: A. Explanation: The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q78. Which chronology card should be filed under The transparent ownership statement for this owner?

A. The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery. B. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. C. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. D. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around.

Answer: B. Explanation: The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q79. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The transparent ownership statement for this owner?

A. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. B. The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around. C. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A → B → C → D rotation. D. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it.

Answer: C. Explanation: The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A → B → C → D rotation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q80. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The transparent ownership statement for this owner?

A. The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination. B. The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it. C. The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority. D. The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A → B → C → D rotation.

Answer: D. Explanation: The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

PYQS AND ANSWER PRACTICE

TRANSPARENT ZERO-DIRECT-PYQ AUDIT

The audited routing ledgers route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner for the covered years, and that zero is reported openly rather than concealed or filled with a manufactured demand card. The four audited ledgers consulted are the Mains routing ledgers for 2018 to 2023 and for 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims routing ledgers for 2018 to 2023 and for 2024 to 2025, and neither the Basic owner nor the Advanced owner for this topic carries a generated previous-year integration block, which is itself consistent with that zero. Both owners state independently that there is no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare in the audited local previous-year texts, and this package adopts exactly that position. The nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation for Scheduled Castes in minority institutions, and the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes it to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here; the doctrinal interpretation of Articles 29 and 30 is likewise routed to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and is cross-linked rather than duplicated. The practice in this package therefore consists of six original Mains questions with model solutions, each written to the repository's examiner-grade standard using the claim, named evidence, analysis and qualification pattern, together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation. Each model solution opens with its analytical claim so that the evidence which follows does argumentative rather than decorative work. The locally held OCR-searchable official General Studies papers were read only to confirm that no question on this owner's subject matter is routed here; no question was invented from them, no marking scheme or page precision was imported and no official answer key is claimed for any question anywhere in this package.

OWNER PYQ LEDGER EXTRACTS

9. PYQ application

- ANALYSIS: There is no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 GS-II Mains PYQ specifically on minority rights/welfare in the audited local PYQ texts. However, questions on secularism, communal harmony and educational rights may intersect with this topic. A strong answer should cite NCM's statutory (not constitutional) status, the six notified communities, PM VIKAS structure, and Art 29/30 rights.

10. PYQ-based analytical application

- ANALYSIS: There is no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 GS-II Mains PYQ specifically on minority rights/welfare in the audited local PYQ texts. A strong Mains answer should: (a) distinguish NCM's statutory status from constitutional commissions, (b) cite TMA Pai for state-level determination of minority status, (c) reference the Sachar Committee for outcome gaps, and (d) for Waqf questions, clearly distinguish enacted law from stayed provisions and pending constitutional questions.

ORIGINAL MAINS 1 - 10 MARKS

Question: Examine the composition and mandate of the National Commission for Minorities and explain how it differs from the constitutional commissions. Answer in about 150 words.

Model thesis: Legal basis determines institutional security, so the examination must name the 1992 Act, state the composition and the five recorded functions, and then contrast entrenchment by amendment with creation by ordinary law.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- The National Commission for Minorities is constituted under the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, with the commission itself constituted in 1993, and it is therefore a statutory body created by ordinary legislation, which distinguishes it sharply from the commissions for the Scheduled Castes, the Scheduled Tribes and the backward classes, each of which is entrenched in the Constitution after amendment; the owners treat this as the single most tested institutional distinction in the topic, because it determines both the security of the institution against ordinary legislative change and the framing of any recommendation about strengthening it.
- The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority.
- The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around.
- The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery.

Qualified conclusion: Legal basis determines institutional security, so the examination must name the 1992 Act, state the composition and the five recorded functions, and then contrast entrenchment by amendment with creation by ordinary law.

ORIGINAL MAINS 2 - 10 MARKS

Question: Distinguish the pan-India livelihood umbrella of the minority-affairs ministry from area-based minority development, and explain why the distinction matters in an answer. Answer in about 150 words.

Model thesis: The two instruments target different objects, so the distinction must name the five merged schemes and the scheme's own recorded routes on one side and the concentration-area threshold on the other, then show what each can and cannot evidence.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- The Pradhan Mantri Virsat Ka Samvardhan about page of the Ministry of Minority Affairs, read on 2 September 2026, records that the ministry seeks to facilitate opportunities for minority communities in education, skilling and employment; that a large cross-section of minorities are engaged as artisans and craftspersons in urban and rural areas, often relying on agriculture and allied activities as a secondary source of livelihood, and that because the art and craft sector is dispersed and unorganised these artisans are exposed to the vulnerabilities of informal employment and face challenges of capital, marketing support, design, technology and asymmetric market information; that the ministry designed an integrated scheme called PM VIKAS combining its five erstwhile livelihood schemes, namely Seekho aur Kamao, USTTAD, Hamari Dharohar, Nai Roshni and Nai Manzil; that PM VIKAS is a Central Sector scheme aligned with the Fifteenth Finance Commission cycle period up to 2025-26; and that the initiative aligns with Sustainable Development Goals 1, 5, 8 and 10; nothing beyond those recorded statements is claimed, and no coverage, training, placement or expenditure count is asserted.
- The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent.

- The owners define a minority-concentration area as a block, district or town with a minority population above a threshold, typically twenty-five per cent or higher, used to target infrastructure and development schemes, and they record the area-development route as the instrument that carries that targeting while the umbrella livelihood scheme operates pan-India; they also record the trade-off honestly, namely that area targeting ensures resources reach underserved populations but may reinforce segregation or communal framing if it is not integrated with broader development planning, so an answer must weigh reach against framing rather than assuming targeting is costless.
- The owners impose an unusual and deliberate discipline on this topic: the names, classes and annual application status of minority scholarships are volatile, so a scholarship may be named in an answer only after the contemporaneous ministry or National Scholarship Portal notice has been checked, and the continuation of a bridge-education or open-schooling route under the umbrella scheme is not proof that an earlier pre-matriculation, post-matriculation or merit-cum-means scholarship remains open on unchanged terms; the reason for the rule is that a historical scheme list is the commonest source of a confidently stated but outdated claim in this subject.

Qualified conclusion: The two instruments target different objects, so the distinction must name the five merged schemes and the scheme's own recorded routes on one side and the concentration-area threshold on the other, then show what each can and cannot evidence.

ORIGINAL MAINS 3 - 15 MARKS

Question: Critically examine the proposition that minority welfare policy must bridge the gap between formal rights and substantive outcomes. Answer in about 250 words.

Model thesis: Rights secure standing while outcomes require capability, so the examination must run the constitutional guarantees and the advisory monitoring body against the dated diagnosis of deficits, and must close on what current policy actually measures.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery.
- The owners record the commission's composition as a Chairperson, a Vice-Chairperson and five Members, and its mandate as evaluating the progress of the development of minorities, monitoring the working of the safeguards provided in the Constitution and in laws, looking into specific complaints of deprivation of rights, making recommendations for remedial measures and studying problems arising from discrimination; they then state the limit that governs every answer about its effectiveness, which is that the commission has no enforcement power and its recommendations are advisory rather than self-executing orders, so its impact is a function of governmental responsiveness and not of its own authority.
- The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation.
- The owners record the umbrella scheme's routes as traditional and non-traditional skilling, women's leadership and entrepreneurship, bridge education and credit facilitation, and they state the boundary twice over: it is not simply a scholarship scheme and it is not the area-infrastructure programme for minority-concentration areas, because those are distinct instruments with distinct targeting logics; the answer-writing consequence is that a candidate who cites the umbrella scheme as evidence that infrastructure reached a minority-concentration district has attributed an outcome to the wrong instrument, which is exactly the attribution error the owners exist to prevent.

Qualified conclusion: Rights secure standing while outcomes require capability, so the examination must run the constitutional guarantees and the advisory monitoring body against the dated diagnosis of deficits, and must close on what current policy actually measures.

ORIGINAL MAINS 4 - 15 MARKS

Question: Assess the balance between State regulation and minority institutional autonomy in the light of the 2025 endowment-law reform and the litigation it produced. Answer in about 250 words.

Model thesis: Regulation and autonomy are both constitutionally grounded, so the assessment must separate enacted text, stayed provisions, capped provisions and pending questions before drawing any conclusion about the balance.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- The owners record that Parliament enacted the Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, numbered as Act No. 14 of 2025, after presidential assent on 5 April 2025, and that its reforms include registration requirements, the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, dispute-resolution mechanisms and governance changes in the boards; the owners then require the enactment to be kept separate from its operation, because several provisions became the subject of constitutional challenge almost immediately, and an answer that describes the Act without distinguishing enacted text from operative text will state the law incorrectly.
- The owners record that on 15 September 2025 the Supreme Court, ruling on multiple petitions challenging the constitutionality of the amending Act, declined to stay the Act in its entirety, holding that a wholesale stay of a statute is warranted only in the rarest of cases, and stayed specific provisions on an interim basis: first, the requirement that a person show five years of practising Islam before creating a waqf, stayed until States frame rules or a mechanism to determine this; and second, the provision empowering a government-designated officer such as a Collector to determine unilaterally the status of a disputed government-versus-waqf property, which the Court found concentrated adjudicatory power in the executive.
- The owners record the remainder of the same interim order with equal precision: the Court capped non-Muslim membership at a maximum of four out of twenty-two on the Central Waqf Council and three out of eleven on a State Waqf Board while not staying the provision allowing non-Muslim appointees as such, did not stay the prospective abolition of waqf by user for future claims, and did not treat the amendment as retrospectively affecting already-registered waqf properties; the discipline is that an interim order which stays two provisions, caps a third and leaves others operative cannot be summarised as the Court either upholding or striking down the Act.
- The owners state the status boundary as at 21 July 2026: several substantive constitutional questions raised by the challenge, including minority institutional autonomy and the permissible extent of State regulation of religious-endowment administration, remain pending final adjudication, no final judgment has been delivered, and the position in force is the interim arrangement of 15 September 2025 under which the Act operates except for the specifically stayed provisions; the examinable rule is therefore that an answer must label the position as interim and pending, because presenting an interim order as a final constitutional ruling is a status error and not a matter of emphasis.

Qualified conclusion: Regulation and autonomy are both constitutionally grounded, so the assessment must separate enacted text, stayed provisions, capped provisions and pending questions before drawing any conclusion about the balance.

ORIGINAL MAINS 5 - 20 MARKS

Question: Analyse why the determination of minority status at the State level complicates a national minority-welfare policy, and how the complication should be handled. Answer in about 300 words.

Model thesis: A federal unit of reference makes minority status variable, so the analysis must connect the state-unit holding to notification, to educational-institution rights and to scheme targeting, and must resolve the tension without denying either limb.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- The owners record the holding in the TMA Pai Foundation case of 2002 that minority status for the purposes of Article 30 is determined at the State level rather than at the national level, so a community may be a minority in one State and not in another, and that minorities have the right to establish and administer educational institutions including fixing fees and selecting students, subject to reasonable regulation to prevent maladministration; the analytical value of the state-unit principle is that it converts a single national question about minority rights into a federal question whose answer varies by the unit of reference, and the examinable trap is to assert a national determination.
- The owners state expressly that Article 30 covers both religious and linguistic minorities, so a community may qualify on either ground or on both depending on the State of reference, and that the right protected is the right to establish and to administer, which includes ordinary institutional decisions subject to reasonable regulation; the trap this defuses is the assumption that minority rights in India are a religious-minority subject alone, which drops the linguistic limb and with it the whole mother-tongue and linguistic-minority architecture that Articles 350A and 350B carry.
- The owners record that a community becomes a minority at the national level when it is notified by the central government under Section 2(c) of the National Commission for Minorities Act, 1992, and that as of 2014 six communities are centrally notified, namely Muslims, Christians, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains, with Jains notified in 2014; the discipline that follows is that notification is a legal act under a named statutory provision rather than a demographic description, so an answer that names only the two largest communities has misstated the legal position, and the number six with the 2014 addition is the exact fact that close options are built around.
- The owners record the National Commission for Minority Educational Institutions Act, 2004 as a specialised minority-education route sitting alongside the general commission, and they attach the qualification that neither the general commission nor the specialised education commission replaces the courts or the ordinary equality guarantees; the reason this matters in an answer is that a candidate asked about institutional remedies for a minority-education grievance must be able to name a specialised statutory route, state that it is specialised rather than general, and then say honestly that it supplements rather than displaces judicial remedy.

Qualified conclusion: A federal unit of reference makes minority status variable, so the analysis must connect the state-unit holding to notification, to educational-institution rights and to scheme targeting, and must resolve the tension without denying either limb.

ORIGINAL MAINS 6 - 20 MARKS

Question: Evaluate the claim that minority welfare in India is strong on protection and weak on measurement. Answer in about 300 words.

Model thesis: Protection and measurement fail in different places, so the evaluation must show that the constitutional and statutory architecture is settled while the outcome indicators are not, and must close with a graded verdict rather than a uniform one.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- The owners record the constitutional layer as Articles 25 to 30 together with Articles 350A and 350B, where Article 29 protects the right of any section of citizens having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve it, Article 30 guarantees the right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice, Article 350A concerns instruction in the mother tongue at the primary stage and Article 350B provides for the Special Officer for Linguistic Minorities; the owners route the doctrinal interpretation of these articles to the Polity fundamental-rights owner and require the status distinction to be used here rather than the doctrine re-taught, so a social-justice answer should cite the provision, state its effect and then argue about delivery.

- A waqf is an Islamic religious endowment, that is a dedication of movable or immovable property for a purpose recognised by Muslim law as pious, religious or charitable, and the owners record that waqf properties are managed by State Waqf Boards, which are statutory bodies, under the oversight of the Central Waqf Council, with the governing statute being the Waqf Act, 1995 as amended; the administrative point that matters in an answer is that the revenue generated from endowment property is meant to support the religious or charitable purpose of the dedication, so encroachment and weak record-keeping are welfare losses to the beneficiary community and not merely property-law problems.
- The owners record the committee chaired by Justice Rajindar Sachar, reporting in 2006, as the named evidence base that documented deficits for Muslims in education, formal employment, credit and public representation, and they record both its significance and its limitation: its significance is that it shifted the debate from communal rhetoric to measurable capability gaps, and its limitation is that its findings are dated and vary by region, class and gender, so they require updating and must not be universalised; alongside it the owners record the measurement gap in current policy, which tracks training, bridge-education or infrastructure outputs rather than change in educational attainment, employment and representation.
- The audited routing ledgers, which cover the Mains papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025 and the Prelims papers for 2018 to 2023 and 2024 to 2025, route no General Studies Mains demand and no objective demand to this owner, and both the Basic and the Advanced owner state independently that no confirmed direct 2024 or 2025 General Studies Paper II Mains question specifically on minority rights or welfare exists in the audited local texts, which is consistent with that zero; the nearest neighbouring demand is the 2018 General Studies Paper II question on the Scheduled Caste commission and reservation in minority institutions, which the audited 2018-2023 Mains routing ledger routes to the Polity commissions owner together with the consolidated body-design owner, so no ownership is claimed over it here, and the practice in this package is therefore six original Mains questions with model solutions together with eighty original objective questions on a strict A -> B -> C -> D rotation.

Qualified conclusion: Protection and measurement fail in different places, so the evaluation must show that the constitutional and statutory architecture is settled while the outcome indicators are not, and must close with a graded verdict rather than a uniform one.