

SOLVED PRACTICE WORKBOOK

Communalism - Solved Practice Workbook

UPSC complete learning session | Foundation to advanced | Concepts, evidence, practice and answer writing

Original deterministic study visual; labels are explanatory, not textual quotations.

Source order: repository knowledge -> official current linkage -> clearly marked analysis. No fabricated PYQs or statistics.

CONTENTS / WORKBOOK INDEX

Major learning parts and meaningful subtopics are listed in document order. Page numbers are generated from the final PDF layout; PDF bookmarks mirror the same hierarchy.

Communalism - Solved Practice Workbook	5
BASIC MCQS / REMEDIATION	5
Q1. Which statement correctly identifies Communalism defined?	5
Q2. Which chronology card should be filed under Communalism defined?	5
Q3. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Communalism defined?	5
Q4. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Communalism defined?	6
Q5. Which statement correctly identifies Mobilisation, not piety?	6
Q6. Which chronology card should be filed under Mobilisation, not piety?	6
Q7. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Mobilisation, not piety?	7
Q8. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Mobilisation, not piety?	7
Q9. Which statement correctly identifies Majority, minority and separatist forms?	7
Q10. Which chronology card should be filed under Majority, minority and separatist forms?	8
Q11. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Majority, minority and separatist forms?	8
Q12. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Majority, minority and separatist forms?	8
Q13. Which statement correctly identifies The typology must not flatten power?	9
Q14. Which chronology card should be filed under The typology must not flatten power?	9
Q15. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The typology must not flatten power?	9
Q16. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The typology must not flatten power?	10
Q17. Which statement correctly identifies Primordialism?	10
Q18. Which chronology card should be filed under Primordialism?	10
Q19. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Primordialism?	11
Q20. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Primordialism?	11
Q21. Which statement correctly identifies Instrumentalism and constructivism?	11
Q22. Which chronology card should be filed under Instrumentalism and constructivism?	12
Q23. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Instrumentalism and constructivism?	12
Q24. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Instrumentalism and constructivism?	12
Q25. Which statement correctly identifies Power struggle beside relative deprivation?	13
Q26. Which chronology card should be filed under Power struggle beside relative deprivation?	13
Q27. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Power struggle beside relative deprivation?	13

Q28. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Power struggle beside relative deprivation?	14
Q29. Which statement correctly identifies Structural causes of violence?	14
Q30. Which chronology card should be filed under Structural causes of violence?	14
Q31. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Structural causes of violence?	15
Q32. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Structural causes of violence?	15
Q33. Which statement correctly identifies Triggering causes?	15
Q34. Which chronology card should be filed under Triggering causes?	16
Q35. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Triggering causes?	16
Q36. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Triggering causes?	16
Q37. Which statement correctly identifies Rumour amplification?	17
Q38. Which chronology card should be filed under Rumour amplification?	17
Q39. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Rumour amplification?	17
Q40. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Rumour amplification?	18
Q41. Which statement correctly identifies Polarisation and segregation?	18
Q42. Which chronology card should be filed under Polarisation and segregation?	18
Q43. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Polarisation and segregation?	19
Q44. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Polarisation and segregation?	19
Q45. Which statement correctly identifies Violence as a contingent outcome?	19
Q46. Which chronology card should be filed under Violence as a contingent outcome?	20
Q47. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Violence as a contingent outcome?	20
Q48. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Violence as a contingent outcome?	20
Q49. Which statement correctly identifies Impartiality against mere presence?	21
Q50. Which chronology card should be filed under Impartiality against mere presence?	21
Q51. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Impartiality against mere presence?	21
Q52. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Impartiality against mere presence?	22
Q53. Which statement correctly identifies The trust-repair sequence?	22
Q54. Which chronology card should be filed under The trust-repair sequence?	22
Q55. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The trust-repair sequence?	23
Q56. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The trust-repair sequence?	23
Q57. Which statement correctly identifies Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991?	24
Q58. Which chronology card should be filed under Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991?	24
Q59. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991?	24

Q60. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991?	25
Q61. Which statement correctly identifies Legislative freeze against judicial adjudication?	25
Q62. Which chronology card should be filed under Legislative freeze against judicial adjudication?	26
Q63. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Legislative freeze against judicial adjudication?	26
Q64. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Legislative freeze against judicial adjudication?	26
Q65. Which statement correctly identifies Post-liberalisation economy and identity framing?	27
Q66. Which chronology card should be filed under Post-liberalisation economy and identity framing?	27
Q67. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Post-liberalisation economy and identity framing?	28
Q68. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Post-liberalisation economy and identity framing?	28
Q69. Which statement correctly identifies National integration beside communal harmony?	28
Q70. Which chronology card should be filed under National integration beside communal harmony?	29
Q71. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of National integration beside communal harmony?	29
Q72. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about National integration beside communal harmony?	30
Q73. Which statement correctly identifies Reversibility?	30
Q74. Which chronology card should be filed under Reversibility?	30
Q75. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Reversibility?	31
Q76. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Reversibility?	31
Q77. Which statement correctly identifies Verified direct Mains demands and an honest recent zero?	32
Q78. Which chronology card should be filed under Verified direct Mains demands and an honest recent zero?	32
Q79. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Verified direct Mains demands and an honest recent zero?	33
Q80. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Verified direct Mains demands and an honest recent zero?	33

PYQS AND ANSWER PRACTICE 33

VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT	34
OWNER PYQ LEDGER EXTRACTS	35
PYQ DEMAND CARD 1 - 2018 GS-I Q20	36
PYQ DEMAND CARD 2 - 2023 GS-I Q20	37
ORIGINAL MAINS 1 - 10 MARKS	39
ORIGINAL MAINS 2 - 10 MARKS	40
ORIGINAL MAINS 3 - 15 MARKS	42
ORIGINAL MAINS 4 - 15 MARKS	43
ORIGINAL MAINS 5 - 20 MARKS	45
ORIGINAL MAINS 6 - 20 MARKS	46

Communalism - Solved Practice Workbook

BASIC MCQS / REMEDIATION

Q1. Which statement correctly identifies Communalism defined?

A. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. B. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. C. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. D. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target.

Answer: A. Explanation: Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q2. Which chronology card should be filed under Communalism defined?

A. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. B. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. C. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. D. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat.

Answer: B. Explanation: Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q3. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Communalism defined?

A. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. B. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. C. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. D. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed.

Answer: C. Explanation: Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q4. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Communalism defined?

A. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. B. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. C. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. D. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion.

Answer: D. Explanation: Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q5. Which statement correctly identifies Mobilisation, not piety?

A. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. B. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. C. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. D. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed.

Answer: A. Explanation: Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q6. Which chronology card should be filed under Mobilisation, not piety?

A. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. B. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. C. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. D. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed.

Answer: B. Explanation: Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q7. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Mobilisation, not piety?

A. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. B. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. C. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. D. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable.

Answer: C. Explanation: Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q8. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Mobilisation, not piety?

A. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. B. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. C. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. D. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target.

Answer: D. Explanation: Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q9. Which statement correctly identifies Majority, minority and separatist forms?

A. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. B. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. C. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. D. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat.

Answer: A. Explanation: Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q10. Which chronology card should be filed under Majority, minority and separatist forms?

A. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. B. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. C. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. D. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable.

Answer: B. Explanation: Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q11. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Majority, minority and separatist forms?

A. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. B. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. C. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. D. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible.

Answer: C. Explanation: Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q12. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Majority, minority and separatist forms?

A. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. B. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. C. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. D. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification.

Answer: D. Explanation: Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q13. Which statement correctly identifies The typology must not flatten power?

A. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. B. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. C. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. D. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable.

Answer: A. Explanation: All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q14. Which chronology card should be filed under The typology must not flatten power?

A. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. B. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. C. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. D. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable.

Answer: B. Explanation: All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q15. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The typology must not flatten power?

A. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. B. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. C. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. D. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer.

Answer: C. Explanation: All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q16. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The typology must not flatten power?

A. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted. B. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. C. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. D. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat.

Answer: D. Explanation: All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q17. Which statement correctly identifies Primordialism?

A. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. B. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. C. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. D. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible.

Answer: A. Explanation: Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q18. Which chronology card should be filed under Primordialism?

A. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. B. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. C. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. D. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible.

Answer: B. Explanation: Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q19. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Primordialism?

A. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted. B. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. C. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. D. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible.

Answer: C. Explanation: Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q20. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Primordialism?

A. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted. B. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. C. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. D. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed.

Answer: D. Explanation: Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q21. Which statement correctly identifies Instrumentalism and constructivism?

A. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. B. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. C. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. D. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible.

Answer: A. Explanation: Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q22. Which chronology card should be filed under Instrumentalism and constructivism?

A. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. B. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. C. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. D. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted.

Answer: B. Explanation: Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q23. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Instrumentalism and constructivism?

A. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. B. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. C. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. D. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted.

Answer: C. Explanation: Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q24. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Instrumentalism and constructivism?

A. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted. B. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. C. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. D. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable.

Answer: D. Explanation: Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q25. Which statement correctly identifies Power struggle beside relative deprivation?

A. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. B. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. C. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. D. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted.

Answer: A. Explanation: Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q26. Which chronology card should be filed under Power struggle beside relative deprivation?

A. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted. B. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. C. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. D. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer.

Answer: B. Explanation: Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q27. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Power struggle beside relative deprivation?

A. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. B. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. C. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. D. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted.

Answer: C. Explanation: Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q28. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Power struggle beside relative deprivation?

A. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. B. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. C. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused. D. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence.

Answer: D. Explanation: Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q29. Which statement correctly identifies Structural causes of violence?

A. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. B. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. C. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. D. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted.

Answer: A. Explanation: Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q30. Which chronology card should be filed under Structural causes of violence?

A. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. B. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. C. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. D. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted.

Answer: B. Explanation: Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. The remaining options belong to different

Q31. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Structural causes of violence?

A. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. B. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. C. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. D. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused.

Answer: C. Explanation: Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q32. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Structural causes of violence?

A. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. B. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. C. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused. D. Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible.

Answer: D. Explanation: Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q33. Which statement correctly identifies Triggering causes?

A. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. B. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. C. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. D. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted.

Answer: A. Explanation: Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q34. Which chronology card should be filed under Triggering causes?

A. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. B. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. C. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused. D. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom.

Answer: B. Explanation: Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q35. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Triggering causes?

A. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. B. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. C. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. D. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused.

Answer: C. Explanation: Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q36. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Triggering causes?

A. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception. B. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. C. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused. D. Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer.

Answer: D. Explanation: Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q37. Which statement correctly identifies Rumour amplification?

A. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted. B. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. C. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused. D. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom.

Answer: A. Explanation: Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q38. Which chronology card should be filed under Rumour amplification?

A. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. B. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted. C. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. D. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused.

Answer: B. Explanation: Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q39. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Rumour amplification?

A. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. B. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception. C. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted. D. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused.

Answer: C. Explanation: Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q40. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Rumour amplification?

A. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. B. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception. C. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. D. Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted.

Answer: D. Explanation: Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q41. Which statement correctly identifies Polarisation and segregation?

A. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. B. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused. C. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. D. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first.

Answer: A. Explanation: Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q42. Which chronology card should be filed under Polarisation and segregation?

A. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused. B. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. C. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. D. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception.

Answer: B. Explanation: Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q43. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Polarisation and segregation?

A. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception. B. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. C. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. D. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here.

Answer: C. Explanation: Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q44. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Polarisation and segregation?

A. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. B. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception. C. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. D. Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom.

Answer: D. Explanation: Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q45. Which statement correctly identifies Violence as a contingent outcome?

A. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. B. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception. C. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. D. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused.

Answer: A. Explanation: Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q46. Which chronology card should be filed under Violence as a contingent outcome?

A. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. B. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. C. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. D. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception.

Answer: B. Explanation: Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q47. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Violence as a contingent outcome?

A. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. B. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. C. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. D. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception.

Answer: C. Explanation: Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q48. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Violence as a contingent outcome?

A. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. B. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. C. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. D. Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode.

Answer: D. Explanation: Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q49. Which statement correctly identifies Impartiality against mere presence?

A. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused. B. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. C. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. D. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception.

Answer: A. Explanation: The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q50. Which chronology card should be filed under Impartiality against mere presence?

A. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. B. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused. C. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. D. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception.

Answer: B. Explanation: The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q51. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Impartiality against mere presence?

A. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. B. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. C. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused. D. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence.

Answer: C. Explanation: The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q52. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Impartiality against mere presence?

A. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. B. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. C. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. D. The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused.

Answer: D. Explanation: The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q53. Which statement correctly identifies The trust-repair sequence?

A. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. B. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. C. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception. D. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here.

Answer: A. Explanation: Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q54. Which chronology card should be filed under The trust-repair sequence?

A. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. B. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. C. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. D. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence.

Answer: B. Explanation: Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q55. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of The trust-repair sequence?

A. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. B. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. C. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. D. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity.

Answer: C. Explanation: Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q56. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about The trust-repair sequence?

A. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question. B. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. C. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. D. Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first.

Answer: D. Explanation: Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q57. Which statement correctly identifies Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991?

A. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception. B. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. C. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. D. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity.

Answer: A. Explanation: Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q58. Which chronology card should be filed under Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991?

A. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. B. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception. C. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. D. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity.

Answer: B. Explanation: Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q59. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991?

A. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. B. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question. C. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception. D. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful.

Answer: C. Explanation: Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q60. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991?

A. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. B. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. C. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question. D. Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception.

Answer: D. Explanation: Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q61. Which statement correctly identifies Legislative freeze against judicial adjudication?

A. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. B. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. C. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. D. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity.

Answer: A. Explanation: The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q62. Which chronology card should be filed under Legislative freeze against judicial adjudication?

A. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. B. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. C. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. D. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question.

Answer: B. Explanation: The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q63. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Legislative freeze against judicial adjudication?

A. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. B. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. C. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. D. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question.

Answer: C. Explanation: The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q64. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Legislative freeze against judicial adjudication?

A. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question. B. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. C. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. D. The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here.

Answer: D. Explanation: The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q65. Which statement correctly identifies Post-liberalisation economy and identity framing?

A. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. B. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. C. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. D. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question.

Answer: A. Explanation: Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q66. Which chronology card should be filed under Post-liberalisation economy and identity framing?

A. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question. B. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. C. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. D. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful.

Answer: B. Explanation: Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or

Q67. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Post-liberalisation economy and identity framing?

A. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. B. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. C. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. D. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question.

Answer: C. Explanation: Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q68. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Post-liberalisation economy and identity framing?

A. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. B. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. C. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. D. Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence.

Answer: D. Explanation: Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q69. Which statement correctly identifies National integration beside communal harmony?

A. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. B. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question. C. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. D. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion.

Answer: A. Explanation: National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q70. Which chronology card should be filed under National integration beside communal harmony?

A. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. B. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. C. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. D. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question.

Answer: B. Explanation: National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q71. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of National integration beside communal harmony?

A. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. B. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. C. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. D. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target.

Answer: C. Explanation: National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q72. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about National integration beside communal harmony?

A. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. B. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. C. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. D. National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity.

Answer: D. Explanation: National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q73. Which statement correctly identifies Reversibility?

A. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. B. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. C. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question. D. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion.

Answer: A. Explanation: Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q74. Which chronology card should be filed under Reversibility?

A. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. B. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. C. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. D. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion.

Answer: B. Explanation: Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q75. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Reversibility?

A. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. B. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. C. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. D. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat.

Answer: C. Explanation: Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q76. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Reversibility?

A. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. B. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. C. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. D. Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful.

Answer: D. Explanation: Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q77. Which statement correctly identifies Verified direct Mains demands and an honest recent zero?

A. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question. B. Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. C. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. D. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification.

Answer: A. Explanation: Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q78. Which chronology card should be filed under Verified direct Mains demands and an honest recent zero?

A. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. B. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question. C. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. D. Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target.

Answer: B. Explanation: Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q79. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Verified direct Mains demands and an honest recent zero?

A. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. B. Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. C. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question. D. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed.

Answer: C. Explanation: Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q80. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Verified direct Mains demands and an honest recent zero?

A. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. B. All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. C. Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. D. Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question.

Answer: D. Explanation: Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

PYQS AND ANSWER PRACTICE

VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT

Two direct General Studies Paper-I Mains demands are routed to this topic and each is recorded with its exact routing status. The 2018 Q20 demand asking whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 Q20 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism are both routed in the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Advanced owner, while the Core owner's own answer-architecture table records that Core routing supersedes those pointers, so both are answered here from the Basic spine. The locally held official question papers for 2018 and 2023 are scanned images from which reliable English text cannot be extracted, so the audited ledger's neutral demand rendering is used for both years and no verbatim wording is claimed. No direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 Mains ledger and none is present in the two locally held official 2024 and 2025 General Studies Paper-I question papers, so that zero is recorded transparently rather than filled with a fabricated recent question. No marking scheme, official key or model answer of the Union Public Service Commission is held locally, and none is reproduced or inferred. No riot statistic, casualty figure or court order is asserted anywhere in this package.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on "VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT", all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: The answer must resolve the sociological demand in "VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT".

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Define the central concept and separate it from the nearest social or legal category. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
2. Claim and named evidence: Trace the historical and institutional setting instead of assuming a timeless practice. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
3. Claim and named evidence: Explain the norm, incentive, network, power or agency mechanism producing the outcome. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
4. Claim and named evidence: Use one named Indian community, movement, region, institution or source-dated dataset. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
5. Claim and named evidence: Qualify the pattern through intersectionality, regional variation, causation and implementation limits. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: The answer must resolve the sociological demand in "VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT".

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 15-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise five points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For "VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT", replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

OWNER PYQ LEDGER EXTRACTS

9. PYQ application

- ANALYSIS: No direct 2024/2025 GS-I Mains PYQ targets communalism specifically; when a communalism question does appear, anchor the answer in the forms-of-communalism typology, the rumour-polarisation-segregation sequence, and the institutional- impartiality trust-repair mechanism, which remain this topic's core testable content.

10. PYQ-based analytical application

- ANALYSIS: No direct 2024/2025 GS-I Mains PYQ targets communalism as a standalone question in the two locally available Mains papers; this is stated honestly rather than fabricating a recent question. When a communalism question does appear, the expected analytical route is: use instrumentalist/constructivist and primordial-attachment lenses carefully, test structural versus triggering causes against local evidence, and cite the Places of Worship Act only with a dated official status check.

Historical PYQ Integration (2018-2023)

Status: Question-level PYQ demand is integrated into this owner. Provenance: Audited local official-paper routing ledgers: _PYQ-ROUTING-MAINS-GS1-GS2-ESSAY-2018-2023.md.

- Years represented: 2018, 2023
- Paper(s): GS-I
- Routed question demands: 2

Year	Paper	Q	PYQ demand (neutral rendering)	Directive / format	Source status	Owner requirement
2018	GS-I	20	Communalism from power struggle or relative deprivation	Argue by giving suitable illustrations · 15 marks · 250 words	Routed to owning topic	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.
2023	GS-I	20	Post-liberal economy, ethnic identity and communalism	Discuss the impact · 15 marks · 250 words	Routed to owning topic	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.

What this owner must now support

- Communalism from power struggle or relative deprivation
- Post-liberal economy, ethnic identity and communalism

The table integrates the examinable demand and paper metadata. It does not turn an unkeyed objective question into a solved answer, and it does not claim that lexical presence alone proves full conceptual sufficiency.

PYQ DEMAND CARD 1 - 2018 GS-I Q20

Demand: Audited ledger demand rendering: whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation. Argue by giving suitable illustrations, 15 marks, 250 words.

Status: Routed in the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Advanced owner, with the Core owner recording that Core routing supersedes. The locally held official 2018 paper is a scanned image without reliable English text extraction, so the ledger rendering is used and no verbatim wording is claimed.

Model solution: Refuse the either-or framing in the opening move, because an argue directive that offers two candidate causes is testing whether the candidate can show how they interact. Define the object first: communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, and it is distinct from personal religious belief, so the argument is about organisation and grievance rather than about faith. Define the two candidates precisely. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status, and it supplies the actor, the incentive and the organisational capacity. Relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and it supplies the grievance narrative and its emotional resonance. Argue the interaction, which is where the marks are. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how a political, social or economic actor identifies an opportunity to consolidate support by activating religious identity, then invokes real or selectively emphasised historical grievance to give that mobilisation legitimacy, and sustained mobilisation over time hardens previously fluid boundaries. The asymmetry is decisive: organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation, while a grievance that finds no organisation frequently does not become collective violence at all. Bring the structural conditions that let the interaction bite, namely residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions. Add the primordial qualification so the answer is not reductive: attachment to a religious community is a real source of belonging, and taking it seriously is what prevents an instrumentalist argument from sounding like a claim that identity is manufactured. Give an illustration in mechanism form rather than by naming an episode this owner does not evidence: a personal dispute reframed through rumour into a community narrative in a locality where routine contact has already thinned. Conclude that neither cause is sufficient alone, that the defensible verdict names organisation as the mechanism which converts deprivation into mobilisation, and that reversibility follows from this, since reducing the incentive to mobilise identity can soften hardened boundaries.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on "PYQ DEMAND CARD 1 - 2018 GS-I Q20", all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Refuse the either-or framing in the opening move, because an argue directive that offers two candidate causes is testing whether the candidate can show how they interact. Define the object first: communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, and it is distinct from personal religious belief, so the argument is about organisation and grievance rather than about faith. Define the two candidates precisely. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status, and it supplies the actor, the incentive and the organisational capacity. Relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and it supplies the grievance narrative and its emotional resonance. Argue the interaction, which is where the marks are. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how a political, social or economic actor identifies an opportunity to consolidate support by activating religious identity, then invokes real or selectively emphasised historical grievance to give that mobilisation legitimacy, and sustained mobilisation over time hardens previously fluid boundaries. The asymmetry is decisive: organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation, while a grievance that finds no organisation frequently does not become collective violence at all. Bring the structural conditions that let the interaction bite, namely residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions. Add the primordial qualification so the answer is not reductive: attachment to a religious community is a real source of belonging, and taking it seriously is what prevents an instrumentalist argument from sounding like a claim that identity is manufactured. Give an illustration in mechanism form rather than by naming an episode this owner does not evidence: a personal dispute reframed through rumour into a community narrative in a locality where routine contact has already thinned. Conclude that neither cause is sufficient alone, that the defensible verdict names organisation as the mechanism which converts deprivation into mobilisation, and that reversibility follows from this, since reducing the incentive to mobilise identity can soften hardened boundaries.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Demand: Audited ledger demand rendering: whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation. Argue by giving suitable illustrations, 15 marks, 250 words. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Refuse the either-or framing in the opening move, because an argue directive that offers two candidate causes is testing whether the candidate can show how they interact. Define the object first: communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, and it is distinct from personal religious belief, so the argument is about organisation and grievance rather than about faith. Define the two candidates precisely. Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status, and it supplies the actor, the incentive and the organisational capacity. Relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and it supplies the grievance narrative and its emotional resonance. Argue the interaction, which is where the marks are. Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how a political, social or economic actor identifies an opportunity to consolidate support by activating religious identity, then invokes real or selectively emphasised historical grievance to give that mobilisation legitimacy, and sustained mobilisation over time hardens previously fluid boundaries. The asymmetry is decisive: organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation, while a grievance that finds no organisation frequently does not become collective violence at all. Bring the structural conditions that let the interaction bite, namely residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions. Add the primordial qualification so the answer is not reductive: attachment to a religious community is a real source of belonging, and taking it seriously is what prevents an instrumentalist argument from sounding like a claim that identity is manufactured. Give an illustration in mechanism form rather than by naming an episode this owner does not evidence: a personal dispute reframed through rumour into a community narrative in a locality where routine contact has already thinned. Conclude that neither cause is sufficient alone, that the defensible verdict names organisation as the mechanism which converts deprivation into mobilisation, and that reversibility follows from this, since reducing the incentive to mobilise identity can soften hardened boundaries.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 15-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise five points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For "PYQ DEMAND CARD 1 - 2018 GS-I Q20", replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

PYQ DEMAND CARD 2 - 2023 GS-I Q20

Demand: Audited ledger demand rendering: the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism. Discuss the impact, 15 marks, 250 words.

Status: Routed in the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Advanced owner, with the Core owner recording that Core routing supersedes. The locally held official 2023 paper is a scanned image without reliable English text extraction, so the ledger rendering is used and no verbatim wording is claimed.

Model solution: Refuse the mechanical reading of the demand at the outset, because the highest-risk error here is to assert that economic reform caused communalism. State the governing proposition: liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions. Discuss the impact through named conditions rather than through an aggregate claim. Differentiated gains create visible relative advantage between groups and localities, which supplies the reference point that relative deprivation requires. Insecure work and competition over local resources raise the everyday stakes of that comparison. Social and residential segregation reduces the routine contact that would otherwise correct a group-level narrative. Introduce the actor, because a condition does not mobilise itself. Instrumentalist accounts explain how an actor activates religious or ethnic identity as an organising axis when it promises support or resources, and invokes historical grievance to give the framing legitimacy; sustained mobilisation then hardens boundaries that had been more fluid. State the counter-conditions with equal weight, since a discuss directive rewards both directions. Credible, even-handed institutions, prompt verification of rumour and continuing economic interdependence across communities all reduce the probability that insecurity is converted into communal mobilisation, and institutional impartiality rather than mere institutional presence is the quality that does this work. Add the evidence discipline that this owner insists upon: an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence, and no riot statistic, casualty figure or organisational status is asserted here. Conclude that the post-liberal economy is best described as a condition-shaping rather than a cause-producing factor, that ethnic and religious identity becomes salient through organisation rather than automatically, and that the impact is therefore contingent and, in principle, reversible.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on "PYQ DEMAND CARD 2 - 2023 GS-I Q20", all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Refuse the mechanical reading of the demand at the outset, because the highest-risk error here is to assert that economic reform caused communalism. State the governing proposition: liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions. Discuss the impact through named conditions rather than through an aggregate claim. Differentiated gains create visible relative advantage between groups and localities, which supplies the reference point that relative deprivation requires. Insecure work and competition over local resources raise the everyday stakes of that comparison. Social and residential segregation reduces the routine contact that would otherwise correct a group-level narrative. Introduce the actor, because a condition does not mobilise itself. Instrumentalist accounts explain how an actor activates religious or ethnic identity as an organising axis when it promises support or resources, and invokes historical grievance to give the framing legitimacy; sustained mobilisation then hardens boundaries that had been more fluid. State the counter-conditions with equal weight, since a discuss directive rewards both directions. Credible, even-handed institutions, prompt verification of rumour and continuing economic interdependence across communities all reduce the probability that insecurity is converted into communal mobilisation, and institutional impartiality rather than mere institutional presence is the quality that does this work. Add the evidence discipline that this owner insists upon: an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence, and no riot statistic, casualty figure or organisational status is asserted here. Conclude that the post-liberal economy is best described as a condition-shaping rather than a cause-producing factor, that ethnic and religious identity becomes salient through organisation rather than automatically, and that the impact is therefore contingent and, in principle, reversible.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Demand: Audited ledger demand rendering: the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism. Discuss the impact, 15 marks, 250 words. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Refuse the mechanical reading of the demand at the outset, because the highest-risk error here is to assert that economic reform caused communalism. State the governing proposition: liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions. Discuss the impact through named conditions rather than through an aggregate claim. Differentiated gains create visible relative advantage between groups and localities, which supplies the reference point that relative deprivation requires. Insecure work and competition over local resources raise the everyday stakes of that comparison. Social and residential segregation reduces the routine contact that would otherwise correct a group-level narrative. Introduce the actor, because a condition does not mobilise itself. Instrumentalist accounts explain how an actor activates religious or ethnic identity as an organising axis when it promises support or resources, and invokes historical grievance to give the framing legitimacy; sustained mobilisation then hardens boundaries that had been more fluid. State the counter-conditions with equal weight, since a discuss directive rewards both directions. Credible, even-handed institutions, prompt verification of rumour and continuing economic interdependence across communities all reduce the probability that insecurity is converted into communal mobilisation, and institutional impartiality rather than mere institutional presence is the quality that does this work. Add the evidence discipline that this owner insists upon: an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence, and no riot statistic, casualty figure or organisational status is asserted here. Conclude that the post-liberal economy is best described as a condition-shaping rather than a cause-producing factor, that ethnic and religious identity becomes salient through organisation rather than automatically, and that the impact is therefore contingent and, in principle, reversible.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 15-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise five points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For "PYQ DEMAND CARD 2 - 2023 GS-I Q20", replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

ORIGINAL MAINS 1 - 10 MARKS

Question: Distinguish communalism from religious belief and explain why the distinction changes the policy recommendation. Answer in about 150 words.

Model thesis: Because communalism is mobilisation rather than faith, the preventive instruments are institutional and informational rather than religious, and misidentifying the object produces recommendations aimed at belief instead of at organisation.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion.
- Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target.
- Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed.

Qualified conclusion: Because communalism is mobilisation rather than faith, the preventive instruments are institutional and informational rather than religious, and misidentifying the object produces recommendations aimed at belief instead of at organisation.

Demand decoding: The directive explain requires a direct position on "Distinguish communalism from religious belief and explain why the distinction changes the...", all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Because communalism is mobilisation rather than faith, the preventive instruments are institutional and informational rather than religious, and misidentifying the object produces recommendations aimed at belief instead of at organisation.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
2. Claim and named evidence: Mobilisation is the organised conversion of a shared religious identity into a claim on political and social resources, and it is exactly what separates communalism from religiosity, the personal holding and practice of faith, so an answer that misidentifies the object will send every preventive recommendation that follows to the wrong target. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
3. Claim and named evidence: Primordialism explains communal identity as ancient, durable and emotionally meaningful attachment, and its analytical value lies in taking belonging seriously rather than in any claim that conflict is naturally or biologically fixed. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Because communalism is mobilisation rather than faith, the preventive instruments are institutional and informational rather than religious, and misidentifying the object produces recommendations aimed at belief instead of at organisation.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 10-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise three points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For "Distinguish communalism from religious belief and explain why the distinction changes the...", replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

ORIGINAL MAINS 2 - 10 MARKS

Question: Distinguish the majority, minority and separatist forms of communalism and state the limits of the typology. Answer in about 150 words.

Model thesis: The typology usefully separates position and motivation but must not be used to flatten power asymmetry, so it is a starting classification rather than an explanation.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification.
- All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat.

- Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion.

Qualified conclusion: The typology usefully separates position and motivation but must not be used to flatten power asymmetry, so it is a starting classification rather than an explanation.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on "Distinguish the majority, minority and separatist forms of communalism and state the limits...", all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: The typology usefully separates position and motivation but must not be used to flatten power asymmetry, so it is a starting classification rather than an explanation.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Majority communalism describes mobilisation by a dominant group, minority communalism a defensive or assertive mobilisation by a minority group, and separatist communalism a demand for separate political or territorial status, and this typology is one useful heuristic rather than the only scholarly classification. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
2. Claim and named evidence: All three forms are communalism in the technical sense but they differ in social position and typical motivation, so the typology may not be used to erase the power asymmetry and local context that distinguish an assertion of primacy from a defensive response to perceived threat. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
3. Claim and named evidence: Communalism is the use of religious community identity as a basis for political and social mobilisation, often asserting that the community's interests are separate from or opposed to those of other communities, and it is analytically distinct from personal religious belief or devotion. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: The typology usefully separates position and motivation but must not be used to flatten power asymmetry, so it is a starting classification rather than an explanation.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 10-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise three points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For "Distinguish the majority, minority and separatist forms of communalism and state the limits...", replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

ORIGINAL MAINS 3 - 15 MARKS

Question: Examine whether communalism is better explained as a power struggle or as relative deprivation. Answer in about 250 words.

Model thesis: The two mechanisms are complementary rather than rival, because organisation converts grievance into mobilisation while grievance without organisation frequently does not, and the honest verdict names their interaction.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence.
- Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable.
- Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible.
- Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful.

Qualified conclusion: The two mechanisms are complementary rather than rival, because organisation converts grievance into mobilisation while grievance without organisation frequently does not, and the honest verdict names their interaction.

Demand decoding: The directive examine requires a direct position on "Examine whether communalism is better explained as a power struggle or as relative...", all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: The two mechanisms are complementary rather than rival, because organisation converts grievance into mobilisation while grievance without organisation frequently does not, and the honest verdict names their interaction.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Power struggle refers to competition over office, resources and status while relative deprivation refers to a perceived unfair gap against a reference group, and the two are not rival universal causes because organised actors can translate a grievance into mobilisation whereas grievance without organisation need not become violence. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
2. Claim and named evidence: Instrumentalist and constructivist accounts explain how political, social or economic actors activate, frame and organise religious identity for mobilisation advantage, which is why communal conflict is treated as historically and politically constructed rather than inevitable. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
3. Claim and named evidence: Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication.

Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

4. Claim and named evidence: Instrumentalist mobilisation is reversible in principle, because a reduced political incentive to mobilise religious identity or an effective counter-mobilisation around shared civic identity can soften boundaries that sustained mobilisation had hardened, and that reversibility is what makes a preventive conclusion defensible rather than merely hopeful. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: The two mechanisms are complementary rather than rival, because organisation converts grievance into mobilisation while grievance without organisation frequently does not, and the honest verdict names their interaction.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 15-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise five points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For "Examine whether communalism is better explained as a power struggle or as relative...", replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

ORIGINAL MAINS 4 - 15 MARKS

Question: Examine the structural and triggering layers in the escalation of a local incident into communal violence. Answer in about 250 words.

Model thesis: Structural conditions make an episode possible and triggers make it actual, so an interruption strategy that addresses only one layer leaves the other intact and the risk unresolved.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible.
- Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer.
- Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted.
- Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom.

Qualified conclusion: Structural conditions make an episode possible and triggers make it actual, so an interruption strategy that addresses only one layer leaves the other intact and the risk unresolved.

Demand decoding: The directive examine requires a direct position on "Examine the structural and triggering layers in the escalation of a local incident into...", all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Structural conditions make an episode possible and triggers make it actual, so an interruption strategy that addresses only one layer leaves the other intact and the risk unresolved.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Structural causes are residential segregation, competition over local resources, unresolved historical grievance and weak or partisan local institutions, and they create the latent conditions under which an episode of collective violence becomes possible. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
2. Claim and named evidence: Triggering causes are the proximate sparks such as a specific incident, a provocative act or an inflammatory rumour, and because removing a trigger without addressing structural conditions leaves the underlying risk intact both layers must appear in an answer. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
3. Claim and named evidence: Rumour amplification is the rapid circulation of an unverified account of a triggering incident, historically by word of mouth and now often through social media, which reframes a local dispute as a community-versus-community event wherever credible information channels are distrusted. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
4. Claim and named evidence: Polarisation deepens residential and social segregation, and as communities withdraw from routine contact the informal trust-restoring interaction that would otherwise dampen a rumour also disappears, which is why segregation operates as a risk factor and not merely as a symptom. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Structural conditions make an episode possible and triggers make it actual, so an interruption strategy that addresses only one layer leaves the other intact and the risk unresolved.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 15-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise five points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For "Examine the structural and triggering layers in the escalation of a local incident into...", replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

ORIGINAL MAINS 5 - 20 MARKS

Question: Assess institutional impartiality as the primary lever of inter-community trust repair. Answer in about 300 words.

Model thesis: Impartiality rather than presence produces trust, and because sustained contact repairs slowly while rumour spreads quickly, the sequence of verification, even-handed action and contact matters as much as its content.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused.
- Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first.
- Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode.
- National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity.

Qualified conclusion: Impartiality rather than presence produces trust, and because sustained contact repairs slowly while rumour spreads quickly, the sequence of verification, even-handed action and contact matters as much as its content.

Demand decoding: The directive assess requires a direct position on "Assess institutional impartiality as the primary lever of inter-community trust repair...", all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Impartiality rather than presence produces trust, and because sustained contact repairs slowly while rumour spreads quickly, the sequence of verification, even-handed action and contact matters as much as its content.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: The presence of police or administrative machinery in a sensitive area does not by itself build trust, because the quality that produces trust repair is impartiality demonstrated through even-handed action regardless of the community of the complainant or the accused. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
2. Claim and named evidence: Trust repair runs from immediate credible fact verification, through visibly even-handed investigation and protection, to sustained structured inter-community contact through joint civic events, shared local institutions and economic interdependence, and the last step is slower than the first. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
3. Claim and named evidence: Violence becomes substantially more likely where a trigger meets high structural risk without a prompt, credible and impartial institutional response, so the rumour, polarisation, segregation and violence sequence is a diagnostic risk heuristic rather than a universal chronology of every episode. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

4. Claim and named evidence: National integration names the institutional and constitutional mechanisms for managing diversity at the level of the state while communal harmony names everyday social coexistence and trust, and institutional integration does not automatically deliver social harmony, with the National Integration Council's institutional history and status belonging to Polity. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Impartiality rather than presence produces trust, and because sustained contact repairs slowly while rumour spreads quickly, the sequence of verification, even-handed action and contact matters as much as its content.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 20-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise six to eight points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For "Assess institutional impartiality as the primary lever of inter-community trust repair....", replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

ORIGINAL MAINS 6 - 20 MARKS

Question: Assess the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 as a social stability mechanism. Answer in about 300 words.

Model thesis: The Act stabilises present-day coexistence by freezing religious character as on a fixed date rather than by adjudicating historical claims, and any statement about its litigation status must be dated to an official record.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception.
- The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here.
- Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence.
- Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced answer, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question.

Qualified conclusion: The Act stabilises present-day coexistence by freezing religious character as on a fixed date rather than by adjudicating historical claims, and any statement about its litigation status must be dated to an official record.

Demand decoding: The directive assess requires a direct position on "Assess the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 as a social stability mechanism....", all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: The Act stabilises present-day coexistence by freezing religious character as on a fixed date rather than by adjudicating historical claims, and any statement about its litigation status must be dated to an official record.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Section 4 of the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 preserves the religious character of places of worship as it stood on 15 August 1947, subject to the exclusion of the Ayodhya matter and other statutory exceptions including specified ancient and historical monuments and settled or decided categories, so it may not be reduced to an Ayodhya-only exception. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
2. Claim and named evidence: The Act operates as a legislative stability mechanism rather than as judicial adjudication of title on the merits, and its litigation status must be checked against the official Supreme Court case-status or order record, since public materials checked on 21 July 2026 did not yield a final merits order and none is claimed here. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
3. Claim and named evidence: Liberalisation does not mechanically cause communalism, but it can alter opportunity, insecurity and competition in ways that identity entrepreneurs may frame communally under particular local conditions, so an aggregate economic reform may never be presented as the cause of a specific episode without local evidence. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
4. Claim and named evidence: Two General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic in the audited 2018-2023 ledger, the 2018 demand on whether communalism arises from a power struggle or from relative deprivation and the 2023 demand on the impact of the post-liberal economy and ethnic identity on communalism, both to the Advanced owner, while no direct standalone communalism demand appears in the audited 2024-2025 ledger and that absence is recorded honestly instead of being filled with an invented question. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: The Act stabilises present-day coexistence by freezing religious character as on a fixed date rather than by adjudicating historical claims, and any statement about its litigation status must be dated to an official record.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 20-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise six to eight points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For "Assess the Places of Worship (Special Provisions) Act, 1991 as a social stability mechanism....", replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.