Constructed-response practice and models

Transfer 1. Passage claim: "A dashboard may record closure without repair." What is the author's distinction?

Model answer: Administrative disposal is not the same as solving the underlying service problem.

Transfer 2. Why is "The author dislikes technology" an unsafe inference from a passage that criticises one metric?

Model answer: It exceeds the passage's scope; criticism of a metric does not entail rejection of technology.

Transfer 3. Give a tone answer with evidence for a passage that concedes benefits but warns of hidden costs.

Model answer: The tone is cautious and qualified: it acknowledges benefits while warning that costs may be concealed.

Transfer 4. Resolve "this" in: "The office published disposal counts. This encouraged superficial closure."

Model answer: This refers to publishing or rewarding disposal counts, not merely to the office.

Transfer 5. For a 360-word source at one-third, calculate the target.

Model answer: About 120 words, subject to the paper's exact instruction.

Transfer 6. State the four indispensable precis units.

Model answer: Thesis, major reasoning/mechanisms, material concession and conclusion/recommendation.

Transfer 7. Apply a no-title instruction.

Model answer: Write the precis directly without a heading or title-like label.

Transfer 8. Fidelity check: may a precis add a contemporary example not in the source?

Model answer: No. A precis must not add outside examples or opinion.
