CORE DEFINITIONS
+-----+
01. JUSTICE: Gauba introduces justice through the fair allocation of benefits and burdens, especially where valued goods are scarce and criteria are open to contestation; this is his chapter frame, not an exhaustive definition of every form of justice 02. OPEN SOCIETY: A society where existing arrangements may be criticized and revised through public reasoning, making the search for justice meaningful 03. LEGAL JUSTICE: Justice in the legal sphere may mean either fair administration according to existing law or testing law itself against standards of justice 04. POLITICAL JUSTICE: Transformation of institutions, rights and procedures so that political power reflects the people rather than privileged groups 05. SOCIO-ECONOMIC JUSTICE: Reordering social and economic relations so that exploitation is checked and the material and moral gains of social life reach weaker sections 06. PROCEDURAL JUSTICE: Justice secured through fair rules, impartial application and non-cheating, often modeled on market or competition rules 07. SUBSTANTIVE / DISTRIBUTIVE JUSTICE: In this chapter Gauba treats substantive, social and distributive concerns together: justice is judged by whether actual arrangements improve the condition and life-chances of the poor and underprivileged, not by procedure alone. The terms are not universally synonymous across political theory
08. SOCIAL JUSTICE: In Gauba's modern usage, a progressive demand to transform oppressive social conditions and secure what is due to the underprivileged from organized social life
+-----+

| CHAPTER SPINE (1/2)

| 01. Gauba frames justice as a political allocation question where social advantages are
| scarce and their distribution can be openly debated and revised; corrective, penal and other
| justice questions need not all take this allocative form

| 02. Gauba distinguishes good/bad from right/wrong and treats justice as aligned with the | latter: a question of what is right and reasonable, not merely what is useful. This is his
| anti-utilitarian contrast, not proof that every utilitarian theory is incapable of giving an
| account of justice

| 03. Justice is dynamic because social consciousness changes; arrangements once accepted as
| just may later be condemned as unjust, as with slavery, serfdom or caste-based degradation

04. Ernest Barker's key point is that justice orders liberty, equality and fraternity into an integrated whole rather than leaving them as three isolated slogans

ESSENTIAL DISTINCTIONS
01. Justice according to law => This asks whether decisions are made by general rules, applied impartially and efficiently under existing law; Alf Ross represents this line
02. Law according to justice => This asks whether the law itself has moral value and conforms to what is right-in-itself; Ernest Barker represents this line
03. Core warning => If law is valid, it is automatically just. -> Gauba prefers Barker's view that validity and value are distinct, and that law is strongest when it has both authority and justice
04. Distinction => What to say precisely
05. Procedural justice => It stresses fair rules, impartiality and absence of force or fraud, much like a fair race where cheating is disallowed
06. Substantive / distributive justice => In Gauba's chapter usage, it stresses whether the poor and underprivileged gain real opportunities to improve their lot, even if this requires altering background structures and not just policing rules; substantive and distributive justice remain distinguishable in wider theory
07. Core warning => A procedurally regular result is automatically substantively just. -> Gauba rejects that simplification because open competition inside deep inequality can still leave many trapped in sub-human conditions
08. Balance point => Due process still matters; substantive justice does not erase the need for impartial procedures

ASCII MASTER FLOW – PANEL 8/19: Thinkers and Named Positions (1)

+-----+
| THINKERS AND NAMED POSITIONS (1) |
+-----+
| 01. PLATO: Justice in the traditional sense means each part of the soul and each class in |
| the state doing its proper function under rule of reason; Gauba treats this as a classic |
| conservative/functional view |
| 02. D.D. RAPHAEL: Justice should be read through modern consciousness; legal, political and |
| social change alter what counts as just |
| 03. ERNEST BARKER: Justice is the integrating principle behind liberty, equality and |
| fraternity, and law gains true force when validity is joined with moral value |
| 04. ALF ROSS: Justice in law primarily means efficient, rule-bound and impartial |
| administration according to existing law, not appeal to external moral standards |
+-----+

ASCII MASTER FLOW – PANEL 9/19: Thinkers and Named Positions (2)

+-----+
| THINKERS AND NAMED POSITIONS (2) |
+-----+
| 01. JEREMY BENTHAM: Mainstream utilitarianism focuses on utility and felicific calculation, |
| which Gauba treats as insufficiently attentive to justice as rightness |
| 02. J.S. MILL: Mill develops a utilitarian account of justice rather than abandoning |
| utility. His liberty principle and account of justice show why Gauba's criticism should be |
| directed at reduction of justice to aggregate advantage, not at every utilitarian treatment |
| of rights and justice |
| 03. JOHN RAWLS: Rawls is noted as a critic of utilitarianism and as a thinker who tries to |
| accommodate substantive concerns within a procedural framework |
| 04. C.B. MACPHERSON: Macpherson is used against market-centered proceduralism because |
| capitalist conditions can destroy ordinary people's creative freedom and thus the background |
| fairness of competition |
+-----+
```

ASCII MASTER FLOW – PANEL 10/19: Illustrations Attached to Claims

+-----+
| ILLUSTRATIONS ATTACHED TO CLAIMS |
+-----+
| 01. A law that is impartially applied but bars the poor from real access to courts shows why |
| legal regularity alone may fall short of justice |
| 02. Gauba's own contrast between open society and authoritarian order explains why |
| allocative criteria become publicly contestable where arrangements can be criticized and |
| revised; authoritarian institutions can still be judged unjust even when such contestation |
| is suppressed |
| 03. His use of liberty-equality-fraternity shows that equal formal treatment of worker and |
| employer may still be unjust if the weaker party faces systematic exploitation |
| 04. A fair exam rulebook does not settle justice if only a narrow class can realistically |
| prepare; this is a simple way to explain the gap between procedure and substance |
| 05. Gauba's concluding argument says minimum needs such as subsistence, health care, |
| education and work opportunities must be secured before desert-based differences are |
| defended |

ASCII MASTER FLOW – PANEL 11/19: Comparison Matrix

COMPARISON MATRIX
+-----+
01. LEGAL JUSTICE What it focuses on = Fair administration of law and/or evaluation of whether law itself is just Why it matters = Without it, authority becomes arbitrary or morally empty
02. POLITICAL JUSTICE What it focuses on = Democratic institutions, rule of law, constitutional government, free criticism and free association Why it matters = It ensures that power is not monopolized by privileged groups
03. SOCIO-ECONOMIC JUSTICE What it focuses on = Reordering economic and social relations so the lower and weaker sections gain dignity, protection and material opportunity Why it matters = It prevents economic disparity from hollowing out legal and political justice
04. VALUE What it focuses on = Justice-related role
05. LIBERTY What it focuses on = Justice requires liberty, but only as equal and regulated liberty so one person's freedom does not destroy another's 06. EQUALITY What it focuses on = Justice requires equality, but not merely formal non-discrimination where structural deprivation persists
07. FRATERNITY What it focuses on = Justice further qualifies equality by demanding protection of weaker sections and fair sharing of social advantages as a matter of right, not charity

ASCII MASTER FLOW – PANEL 12/19: Examiner Trap Firewall

+-----+
| EXAMINER TRAP FIREWALL |
+-----+
| 01. TRAP: Justice is only whatever the law says => REPAIR: Gauba explicitly distinguishes |
| legal validity from moral value and prefers a richer view where law must also answer to |
| justice |
| 02. TRAP: Social justice means only welfare charity => REPAIR: Gauba treats it as a |
| structural and rights-based transformation of social conditions, especially for the |
| oppressed and underprivileged |
| 03. TRAP: Procedural fairness settles everything => REPAIR: A fair-looking procedure can |
| still operate inside severe inequality and leave outcomes unjust |
| 04. TRAP: Substantive justice can ignore due process => REPAIR: Gauba does not reject |
| procedure; he rejects the claim that procedure alone is enough |
| 05. TRAP: Liberty, equality and fraternity are separate slogans to be listed one after |
| another => REPAIR: Barker's central point is that justice orders and reconciles them into |
| one coherent scheme |

05. CLOSE: Gauba distinguishes good/bad from right/wrong and treats justice as aligned with the latter: a question of what is right and reasonable, not merely what is useful. This is his anti-utilitarian contrast, not proof that every utilitarian theory is incapable of giving an account of justice. Gauba frames justice as a political allocation question where social advantages are scarce and their distribution can be openly debated and revised; corrective, penal and other justice questions need not all take this allocative form.
