THEORY / CLAIM

- CENTRAL FOCUS
- Monist Argument and Pluralist Reply
- [1] Pluralist reply (MacIver): the state's authority is not categorically different from other associations' authority
- law (not sovereignty) is the true mark of the state, and the state only recognises, not creates, law
- [2] Monist argument: P1 — A state's laws must have one final, determinate source or law becomes contradictory and unenforceable.

OBJECTION / POWER TEST

- P2 — Only a legally supreme, indivisible sovereign can be that final source.
- C — Therefore sovereignty must be absolute, perpetual, universal, inalienable and indivisible (Bodin/Austin, PDF pp.184-187).
- [3] Pluralist reply (Laski, three fronts): (i) historically, custom limits sovereign power in practice even without legal sanction
- (ii) internationally, interdependence makes "absolute" external sovereignty descriptively false
- (iii) organisationally, federal states cannot even locate a single Austinian sovereign — so premise P2 is empirically unsound (PDF pp.201-203).
