

SOLVED PRACTICE WORKBOOK

Social Change and Modernisation - Solved Practice Workbook

UPSC complete learning session | Foundation to advanced | Concepts, evidence, practice and answer writing

Social Change and Modernisation
REFRESHED TEACHING NAVIGATION — BASIC/CORE FIRST
01	FOUNDATION — HOW A SOCIAL-CHANGE QUESTION IS FRAMED Evidence chain: Social change as a multi-theory question Qualified
02	FOUNDATION — THE TWO MACRO-THEORIES SIDE BY SIDE Evidence chain: Structural-functionalism - Conflict theory Qualified
03	FOUNDATION — CHOOSING THE BETTER-SUPPORTED READING The same episode supports both readings, so the answer must argue
04	CORE — EVOLUTIONARY, CYCLICAL AND DIFFUSIONIST ACCOUNTS Evidence chain: Evolutionary and cyclical accounts - Diffusionist
05	CORE — SANSKRITISATION AS STATUS CLAIM Sanskritisation changes position within a hierarchy whose logic is left
06	CORE — WESTERNISATION AS VALUE IMPORT Evidence chain: Westernisation Qualified use: Separate the value axis
07	CORE — MODERNISATION AND THE THREE AXES Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and
08	CORE — STATUS INCONSISTENCY AS A CHANGE ENGINE Evidence chain: Status inconsistency as a change engine Qualified
09	CORE — GREAT TRADITION AND LITTLE TRADITION Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework,
10	CORE — UNIVERSALISATION AND PAROCHIALISATION Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or
11	CORE — SECULARISATION AND ITS TWO NEIGHBOURS Evidence chain: Secularisation as a sociological process -
12	CORE — CONTINUITY ALONGSIDE CHANGE Mains: Structure an enumerate directive so continuity is shown as an
13	CORE SYNTHESIS — CUSTOM, REASON AND OBSCURANTISM Evidence chain: Custom, reason and obscurantism Qualified use:
14	CORE SYNTHESIS — TECHNOLOGY AS A SOCIAL-CHANGE QUESTION Evidence chain: Technology as a social-change question Qualified
15	CORE SYNTHESIS — QUESTION OWNERSHIP AND THE ANSWER SPINE Technically, CORE SYNTHESIS — Question ownership and the answer

Original deterministic study visual; labels are explanatory, not textual quotations.

Source order: repository knowledge -> official current linkage -> clearly marked analysis. No fabricated PYQs or statistics.

CONTENTS / WORKBOOK INDEX

Major learning parts and meaningful subtopics are listed in document order. Page numbers are generated from the final PDF layout; PDF bookmarks mirror the same hierarchy.

Social Change and Modernisation - Solved Practice Workbook 6

BASIC MCQS / REMEDIATION 6

Q1. Which statement correctly identifies Social change as a multi-theory question?	6
Q2. Which chronology card should be filed under Social change as a multi-theory question?	6
Q3. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Social change as a multi-theory question?	6
Q4. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Social change as a multi-theory question?	7
Q5. Which statement correctly identifies Structural-functionalism?	7
Q6. Which chronology card should be filed under Structural-functionalism?	7
Q7. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Structural-functionalism?	8
Q8. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Structural-functionalism?	8
Q9. Which statement correctly identifies Conflict theory?	8
Q10. Which chronology card should be filed under Conflict theory?	9
Q11. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Conflict theory?	9
Q12. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Conflict theory?	9
Q13. Which statement correctly identifies Choosing the better-supported reading?	10
Q14. Which chronology card should be filed under Choosing the better-supported reading?	10
Q15. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Choosing the better-supported reading?	10
Q16. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Choosing the better-supported reading?	11
Q17. Which statement correctly identifies Evolutionary and cyclical accounts?	11
Q18. Which chronology card should be filed under Evolutionary and cyclical accounts?	11
Q19. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Evolutionary and cyclical accounts?	12
Q20. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Evolutionary and cyclical accounts?	12
Q21. Which statement correctly identifies Diffusionist explanation?	12
Q22. Which chronology card should be filed under Diffusionist explanation?	13
Q23. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Diffusionist explanation?	13
Q24. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Diffusionist explanation?	13
Q25. Which statement correctly identifies Sanskritisation?	14
Q26. Which chronology card should be filed under Sanskritisation?	14
Q27. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Sanskritisation?	14

Q28. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Sanskritisation?	15
Q29. Which statement correctly identifies Westernisation?	15
Q30. Which chronology card should be filed under Westernisation?	15
Q31. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Westernisation?	16
Q32. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Westernisation?	16
Q33. Which statement correctly identifies Modernisation?	16
Q34. Which chronology card should be filed under Modernisation?	17
Q35. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Modernisation?	17
Q36. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Modernisation?	17
Q37. Which statement correctly identifies Three axes, not one scale?	18
Q38. Which chronology card should be filed under Three axes, not one scale?	18
Q39. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Three axes, not one scale?	18
Q40. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Three axes, not one scale?	19
Q41. Which statement correctly identifies Status inconsistency as a change engine?	19
Q42. Which chronology card should be filed under Status inconsistency as a change engine?	19
Q43. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Status inconsistency as a change engine?	20
Q44. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Status inconsistency as a change engine?	20
Q45. Which statement correctly identifies Great Tradition and Little Tradition?	20
Q46. Which chronology card should be filed under Great Tradition and Little Tradition?	21
Q47. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Great Tradition and Little Tradition?	21
Q48. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Great Tradition and Little Tradition?	21
Q49. Which statement correctly identifies Universalisation?	22
Q50. Which chronology card should be filed under Universalisation?	22
Q51. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Universalisation?	22
Q52. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Universalisation?	23
Q53. Which statement correctly identifies Parochialisation?	23
Q54. Which chronology card should be filed under Parochialisation?	23
Q55. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Parochialisation?	24
Q56. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Parochialisation?	24
Q57. Which statement correctly identifies Secularisation as a sociological process?	24
Q58. Which chronology card should be filed under Secularisation as a sociological process?	25
Q59. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Secularisation as a sociological process?	25

Q60. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Secularisation as a sociological process?	25
Q61. Which statement correctly identifies Secularisation, secularism and desacralisation?	26
Q62. Which chronology card should be filed under Secularisation, secularism and desacralisation?	26
Q63. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Secularisation, secularism and desacralisation?	27
Q64. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Secularisation, secularism and desacralisation?	27
Q65. Which statement correctly identifies Continuity alongside change?	27
Q66. Which chronology card should be filed under Continuity alongside change?	28
Q67. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Continuity alongside change?	28
Q68. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Continuity alongside change?	29
Q69. Which statement correctly identifies Custom, reason and obscurantism?	29
Q70. Which chronology card should be filed under Custom, reason and obscurantism?	29
Q71. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Custom, reason and obscurantism?	30
Q72. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Custom, reason and obscurantism?	30
Q73. Which statement correctly identifies Technology as a social-change question?	30
Q74. Which chronology card should be filed under Technology as a social-change question?	31
Q75. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Technology as a social-change question?	31
Q76. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Technology as a social-change question?	32
Q77. Which statement correctly identifies Verified direct Mains demands and one ownership conflict?	32
Q78. Which chronology card should be filed under Verified direct Mains demands and one ownership conflict?	32
Q79. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Verified direct Mains demands and one ownership conflict?	33
Q80. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Verified direct Mains demands and one ownership conflict?	33

PYQS AND ANSWER PRACTICE 34

VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT	34
OWNER PYQ LEDGER EXTRACTS	35
PYQ DEMAND CARD 1 - 2020 GS-I Q19	36
PYQ DEMAND CARD 2 - 2021 GS-I Q19	38
PYQ DEMAND CARD 3 - 2021 GS-I Q20	39
PYQ DEMAND CARD 4 - 2025 GS-I Q18	41
ORIGINAL MAINS 1 - 10 MARKS	43
ORIGINAL MAINS 2 - 10 MARKS	44
ORIGINAL MAINS 3 - 15 MARKS	45
ORIGINAL MAINS 4 - 15 MARKS	47

ORIGINAL MAINS 5 - 20 MARKS 48

ORIGINAL MAINS 6 - 20 MARKS 50

Social Change and Modernisation - Solved Practice Workbook

BASIC MCQS / REMEDIATION

Q1. Which statement correctly identifies Social change as a multi-theory question?

A. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. B. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. C. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. D. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led.

Answer: A. Explanation: This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q2. Which chronology card should be filed under Social change as a multi-theory question?

A. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. B. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. C. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. D. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode.

Answer: B. Explanation: This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q3. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Social change as a multi-theory question?

A. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. B. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. C. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. D. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts.

Answer: C. Explanation: This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q4. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Social change as a multi-theory question?

A. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. B. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. C. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. D. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity.

Answer: D. Explanation: This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q5. Which statement correctly identifies Structural-functionalism?

A. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. B. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. C. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. D. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode.

Answer: A. Explanation: Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q6. Which chronology card should be filed under Structural-functionalism?

A. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. B. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. C. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. D. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form.

Answer: B. Explanation: Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q7. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Structural-functionalism?

A. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. B. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. C. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. D. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic.

Answer: C. Explanation: Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q8. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Structural-functionalism?

A. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. B. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. C. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. D. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led.

Answer: D. Explanation: Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q9. Which statement correctly identifies Conflict theory?

A. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. B. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. C. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. D. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies.

Answer: A. Explanation: Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q10. Which chronology card should be filed under Conflict theory?

A. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. B. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. C. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. D. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form.

Answer: B. Explanation: Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q11. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Conflict theory?

A. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. B. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. C. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. D. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts.

Answer: C. Explanation: Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q12. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Conflict theory?

A. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. B. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. C. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community. D. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode.

Answer: D. Explanation: Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q13. Which statement correctly identifies Choosing the better-supported reading?

A. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. B. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. C. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. D. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts.

Answer: A. Explanation: The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q14. Which chronology card should be filed under Choosing the better-supported reading?

A. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. B. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. C. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. D. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts.

Answer: B. Explanation: The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q15. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Choosing the better-supported reading?

A. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. B. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community. C. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. D. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy.

Answer: C. Explanation: The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q16. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Choosing the better-supported reading?

A. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. B. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. C. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community. D. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies.

Answer: D. Explanation: The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q17. Which statement correctly identifies Evolutionary and cyclical accounts?

A. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. B. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. C. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. D. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic.

Answer: A. Explanation: Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q18. Which chronology card should be filed under Evolutionary and cyclical accounts?

A. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. B. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. C. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. D. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community.

Answer: B. Explanation: Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q19. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Evolutionary and cyclical accounts?

A. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community. B. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. C. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. D. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error.

Answer: C. Explanation: Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q20. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Evolutionary and cyclical accounts?

A. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community. B. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. C. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. D. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form.

Answer: D. Explanation: Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q21. Which statement correctly identifies Diffusionist explanation?

A. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. B. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. C. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. D. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community.

Answer: A. Explanation: A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q22. Which chronology card should be filed under Diffusionist explanation?

A. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. B. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. C. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. D. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community.

Answer: B. Explanation: A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q23. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Diffusionist explanation?

A. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. B. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. C. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. D. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community.

Answer: C. Explanation: A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q24. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Diffusionist explanation?

A. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. B. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. C. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. D. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts.

Answer: D. Explanation: A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q25. Which statement correctly identifies Sanskritisation?

A. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. B. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. C. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. D. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community.

Answer: A. Explanation: Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q26. Which chronology card should be filed under Sanskritisation?

A. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community. B. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. C. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. D. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change.

Answer: B. Explanation: Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q27. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Sanskritisation?

A. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. B. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. C. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. D. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation.

Answer: C. Explanation: Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q28. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Sanskritisation?

A. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. B. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. C. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. D. Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic.

Answer: D. Explanation: Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q29. Which statement correctly identifies Westernisation?

A. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. B. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. C. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. D. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community.

Answer: A. Explanation: Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q30. Which chronology card should be filed under Westernisation?

A. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. B. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. C. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. D. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error.

Answer: B. Explanation: Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q31. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Westernisation?

A. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. B. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. C. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. D. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change.

Answer: C. Explanation: Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q32. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Westernisation?

A. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. B. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. C. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. D. Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy.

Answer: D. Explanation: Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q33. Which statement correctly identifies Modernisation?

A. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community. B. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. C. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. D. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation.

Answer: A. Explanation: Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q34. Which chronology card should be filed under Modernisation?

A. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. B. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community. C. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. D. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation.

Answer: B. Explanation: Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q35. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Modernisation?

A. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. B. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. C. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community. D. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange.

Answer: C. Explanation: Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q36. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Modernisation?

A. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. B. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. C. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. D. Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community.

Answer: D. Explanation: Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q37. Which statement correctly identifies Three axes, not one scale?

A. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. B. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. C. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. D. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change.

Answer: A. Explanation: Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q38. Which chronology card should be filed under Three axes, not one scale?

A. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. B. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. C. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. D. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk.

Answer: B. Explanation: Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q39. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Three axes, not one scale?

A. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. B. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. C. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. D. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism.

Answer: C. Explanation: Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q40. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Three axes, not one scale?

A. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. B. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. C. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. D. Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error.

Answer: D. Explanation: Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q41. Which statement correctly identifies Status inconsistency as a change engine?

A. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. B. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. C. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. D. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation.

Answer: A. Explanation: Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q42. Which chronology card should be filed under Status inconsistency as a change engine?

A. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. B. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. C. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. D. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk.

Answer: B. Explanation: Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q43. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Status inconsistency as a change engine?

A. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. B. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. C. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. D. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error.

Answer: C. Explanation: Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q44. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Status inconsistency as a change engine?

A. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. B. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. C. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. D. Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change.

Answer: D. Explanation: Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q45. Which statement correctly identifies Great Tradition and Little Tradition?

A. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. B. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. C. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. D. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange.

Answer: A. Explanation: Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q46. Which chronology card should be filed under Great Tradition and Little Tradition?

A. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. B. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. C. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. D. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange.

Answer: B. Explanation: Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q47. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Great Tradition and Little Tradition?

A. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. B. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. C. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. D. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error.

Answer: C. Explanation: Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q48. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Great Tradition and Little Tradition?

A. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. B. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. C. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. D. Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation.

Answer: D. Explanation: Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q49. Which statement correctly identifies Universalisation?

A. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. B. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. C. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. D. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange.

Answer: A. Explanation: Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q50. Which chronology card should be filed under Universalisation?

A. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. B. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. C. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. D. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism.

Answer: B. Explanation: Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q51. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Universalisation?

A. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. B. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. C. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. D. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error.

Answer: C. Explanation: Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q52. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Universalisation?

A. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. B. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. C. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. D. Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk.

Answer: D. Explanation: Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q53. Which statement correctly identifies Parochialisation?

A. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. B. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. C. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. D. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism.

Answer: A. Explanation: Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q54. Which chronology card should be filed under Parochialisation?

A. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. B. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. C. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. D. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error.

Answer: B. Explanation: Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q55. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Parochialisation?

A. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. B. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. C. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. D. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law.

Answer: C. Explanation: Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q56. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Parochialisation?

A. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. B. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. C. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. D. Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange.

Answer: D. Explanation: Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q57. Which statement correctly identifies Secularisation as a sociological process?

A. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. B. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desecralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. C. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. D. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational.

Answer: A. Explanation: Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q58. Which chronology card should be filed under Secularisation as a sociological process?

A. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. B. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. C. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. D. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational.

Answer: B. Explanation: Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q59. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Secularisation as a sociological process?

A. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. B. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. C. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. D. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational.

Answer: C. Explanation: Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q60. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Secularisation as a sociological process?

A. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. B. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. C. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. D. Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the Answer: D. Explanation: Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q61. Which statement correctly identifies Secularisation, secularism and desacralisation?

A. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. B. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. C. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. D. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law.

Answer: A. Explanation: Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q62. Which chronology card should be filed under Secularisation, secularism and desacralisation?

A. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. B. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. C. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. D. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion.

Answer: B. Explanation: Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q63. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Secularisation, secularism and desacralisation?

A. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. B. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. C. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. D. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity.

Answer: C. Explanation: Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q64. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Secularisation, secularism and desacralisation?

A. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. B. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. C. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. D. Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error.

Answer: D. Explanation: Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q65. Which statement correctly identifies Continuity alongside change?

A. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. B. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. C. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. D. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion.

Answer: A. Explanation: Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q66. Which chronology card should be filed under Continuity alongside change?

A. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. B. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. C. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. D. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology.

Answer: B. Explanation: Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q67. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Continuity alongside change?

A. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. B. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. C. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. D. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion.

Answer: C. Explanation: Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q68. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Continuity alongside change?

A. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. B. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. C. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. D. Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law.

Answer: D. Explanation: Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q69. Which statement correctly identifies Custom, reason and obscurantism?

A. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. B. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. C. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. D. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology.

Answer: A. Explanation: A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q70. Which chronology card should be filed under Custom, reason and obscurantism?

A. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. B. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. C. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. D. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity.

Answer: B. Explanation: A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q71. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Custom, reason and obscurantism?

A. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. B. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. C. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. D. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity.

Answer: C. Explanation: A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q72. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Custom, reason and obscurantism?

A. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. B. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. C. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. D. A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational.

Answer: D. Explanation: A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q73. Which statement correctly identifies Technology as a social-change question?

A. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. B. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. C. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. D. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity.

Answer: A. Explanation: A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q74. Which chronology card should be filed under Technology as a social-change question?

A. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. B. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. C. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. D. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led.

Answer: B. Explanation: A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q75. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Technology as a social-change question?

A. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. B. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. C. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. D. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led.

Answer: C. Explanation: A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q76. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Technology as a social-change question?

A. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. B. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. C. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. D. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology.

Answer: D. Explanation: A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q77. Which statement correctly identifies Verified direct Mains demands and one ownership conflict?

A. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. B. This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. C. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. D. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode.

Answer: A. Explanation: Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q78. Which chronology card should be filed under Verified direct Mains demands and one ownership conflict?

A. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. B. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. C. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. D. Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led.

Answer: B. Explanation: Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q79. Which option preserves the source-bounded meaning of Verified direct Mains demands and one ownership conflict?

A. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. B. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. C. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. D. Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode.

Answer: C. Explanation: Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

Q80. Which statement avoids a close-option trap about Verified direct Mains demands and one ownership conflict?

A. Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. B. A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. C. The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. D. Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion.

Answer: D. Explanation: Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. The remaining options belong to different chronology, actor or analytical categories.

PYQS AND ANSWER PRACTICE

VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT

Four direct General Studies Paper-I Mains demands are routed to this topic and each is recorded with its exact routing status. The 2020 Q19 demand on whether customs and traditions suppress reason leading to obscurantism and the 2021 Q20 demand on the continuity of traditional social values amid social change are routed in the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Advanced owner, while the Core owner's own answer-architecture table records that Core routing supersedes those pointers, so both are answered here from the Basic spine. The 2021 Q19 cryptocurrency demand is recorded in the same ledger as cross-cutting: the instrument route terminates in the answer-complete Economy digital-economy owner while this owner is retained as the society-effect owner, so the answer below is written strictly on the society layer and asserts no price, legal status or adoption figure. The locally held official question papers for 2020 and 2021 are scanned images from which reliable English text cannot be extracted, so the audited ledger's neutral demand rendering is used for those two years and no verbatim wording is claimed. The 2025 Q18 demand on the growth of fast-food industries amid rising health concerns is routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner and its wording was confirmed in the locally held official 2025 General Studies Paper-I; the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims that demand, and this cross-owner conflict is stated openly rather than resolved by an unsupported analytical claim. No marking scheme, official key or model answer of the Union Public Service Commission is held locally, and none is reproduced or inferred.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on "VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT", all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: The answer must resolve the sociological demand in "VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT".

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Define the central concept and separate it from the nearest social or legal category. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
2. Claim and named evidence: Trace the historical and institutional setting instead of assuming a timeless practice. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
3. Claim and named evidence: Explain the norm, incentive, network, power or agency mechanism producing the outcome. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
4. Claim and named evidence: Use one named Indian community, movement, region, institution or source-dated dataset. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
5. Claim and named evidence: Qualify the pattern through intersectionality, regional variation, causation and implementation limits. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: The answer must resolve the sociological demand in "VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT".

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 15-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise five points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For “VERIFIED PYQ OWNERSHIP AUDIT”, replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

OWNER PYQ LEDGER EXTRACTS

9. PYQ application

- ANALYSIS: No direct 2024/2025 GS-I Mains PYQ targets this topic specifically; when a social-change-theory question does appear, anchor the answer in the Sanskritisation-Westernisation-Modernisation triad and the Great Tradition-Little Tradition framework, which remain the syllabus's core testable content here.

Recent PYQ Integration (2024-2025)

Status: 2024-2025 question-level PYQ demand is integrated into this owner. Provenance: Audited local official-paper routing ledgers: _PYQ-ROUTING-MAINS-GS1-GS2-ESSAY-2024-2025.md.

- Years represented: 2025
- Paper(s): GS-I
- Routed question demands: 1

Year	Paper	Q	PYQ demand (neutral rendering)	Directive / format	Source status	Owner requirement
2025	GS-I	18	Growth of fast-food industries amid rising health concerns	Illustrate · 15 marks · 250 words	Routed to owning topic	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.

What this owner must now support

- Growth of fast-food industries amid rising health concerns

This block integrates the 2024-2025 examinable demand and paper metadata. It is kept separate from the 2018-2023 block and does not convert an unkeyed/answer-free objective question into a solved answer.

10. PYQ-based analytical application

- ANALYSIS: No direct 2024/2025 GS-I Mains PYQ targets social-change theory as a standalone question; this is stated honestly. When such a question does appear (a recurring older-pattern theme), the expected analytical route is: select the appropriate macro- theory (structural-functional or conflict) for the specific change episode cited, apply the Sanskritisation-Westernisation-Modernisation triad with axis-specific precision, and, where cultural transmission is at issue, apply universalisation/parochialisation rather than a simple elite-imposition model.

Historical PYQ Integration (2018-2023)

Status: Question-level PYQ demand is integrated into this owner. Provenance: Audited local official-paper routing ledgers: _PYQ-ROUTING-MAINS-GS1-GS2-ESSAY-2018-2023.md.

- Years represented: 2020, 2021
- Paper(s): GS-I
- Routed question demands: 3

Year	Paper	Q	PYQ demand (neutral rendering)	Directive / format	Source status	Owner requirement
2020	GS-I	19	Customs and traditions suppressing reason and obscurantism	Do you agree · 15 marks · 250 words	Routed to owning topic	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.
2021	GS-I	19	Cryptocurrency and its effect on global and Indian society	What is and How does it affect · 15 marks · 250 words	Cross-cutting; Economy instrument route terminates in answer-complete Core; society-effect owner retained	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.
2021	GS-I	20	Continuity of traditional social values amid social change	Enumerate · 15 marks · 250 words	Routed to owning topic	Prepare context, core dimensions, evidence/examples, counterpoint and a concise conclusion.

What this owner must now support

- Customs and traditions suppressing reason and obscurantism
- Cryptocurrency and its effect on global and Indian society
- Continuity of traditional social values amid social change

The table integrates the examinable demand and paper metadata. It does not turn an unkeyed objective question into a solved answer, and it does not claim that lexical presence alone proves full conceptual sufficiency.

PYQ DEMAND CARD 1 - 2020 GS-I Q19

Demand: Audited ledger demand rendering: customs and traditions suppressing reason and leading to obscurantism. Do you agree, 15 marks, 250 words.

Status: Routed in the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Advanced owner, with the Core owner recording that Core routing supersedes. The locally held official 2020 paper is a scanned image without reliable English text extraction, so the ledger rendering is used and no verbatim wording is claimed.

Model solution: Refuse the blanket proposition and replace it with a test, because a do-you-agree directive on this subject is lost either by wholesale defence of custom or by wholesale condemnation of it. State the premise correction first: a custom is not irrational merely because it is old, since custom also transmits socialisation, memory and belonging, and this is exactly the persistence mechanism the continuity literature identifies. Then supply the test that earns the marks. A practice becomes obscurantist in its effect when a particular application blocks inquiry, blocks equal agency or blocks evidence-based choice, so the analysis attaches to the application and the mechanism, never to a community. Show the mechanism working through the vocabulary this owner owns. Sanskritisation demonstrates that ritual practice can be adopted to claim status within an unchanged hierarchy, which is precisely how a practice can be reproduced for reasons that have nothing to do with belief in its content; Westernisation demonstrates that contact with education, law and institutions introduces equality, individual rights and rationality as competing values; and modernisation demonstrates that rational-legal institutions and differentiated occupational roles change the structure in which the practice sits. Name the change mechanisms the directive expects. Formal education and codified law are the institutional channels through which structural modernisation is transmitted across generations, and internal dissent within a community is the mechanism that distinguishes reform from external imposition. Add the two-way cultural qualification so the answer is not a modernisation sermon. Universalisation carries local practice upward into pan-Indian recognition and parochialisation adapts pan-Indian practice to local form, so cultural change in India is negotiated rather than replaced, and reform that ignores this is usually rejected. Conclude that customs neither uniformly suppress reason nor are immune from it, that the defensible position is application-specific and evidence-led, and that no community may be characterised as inherently irrational in an answer of this kind.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on “PYQ DEMAND CARD 1 - 2020 GS-I Q19”, all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Refuse the blanket proposition and replace it with a test, because a do-you-agree directive on this subject is lost either by wholesale defence of custom or by wholesale condemnation of it. State the premise correction first: a custom is not irrational merely because it is old, since custom also transmits socialisation, memory and belonging, and this is exactly the persistence mechanism the continuity literature identifies. Then supply the test that earns the marks. A practice becomes obscurantist in its effect when a particular application blocks inquiry, blocks equal agency or blocks evidence-based choice, so the analysis attaches to the application and the mechanism, never to a community. Show the mechanism working through the vocabulary this owner owns. Sanskritisation demonstrates that ritual practice can be adopted to claim status within an unchanged hierarchy, which is precisely how a practice can be reproduced for reasons that have nothing to do with belief in its content; Westernisation demonstrates that contact with education, law and institutions introduces equality, individual rights and rationality as competing values; and modernisation demonstrates that rational-legal institutions and differentiated occupational roles change the structure in which the practice sits. Name the change mechanisms the directive expects. Formal education and codified law are the institutional channels through which structural modernisation is transmitted across generations, and internal dissent within a community is the mechanism that distinguishes reform from external imposition. Add the two-way cultural qualification so the answer is not a modernisation sermon. Universalisation carries local practice upward into pan-Indian recognition and parochialisation adapts pan-Indian practice to local form, so cultural change in India is negotiated rather than replaced, and reform that ignores this is usually rejected. Conclude that customs neither uniformly suppress reason nor are immune from it, that the defensible position is application-specific and evidence-led, and that no community may be characterised as inherently irrational in an answer of this kind.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Demand: Audited ledger demand rendering: customs and traditions suppressing reason and leading to obscurantism. Do you agree, 15 marks, 250 words. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Refuse the blanket proposition and replace it with a test, because a do-you-agree directive on this subject is lost either by wholesale defence of custom or by wholesale condemnation of it. State the premise correction first: a custom is not irrational merely because it is old, since custom also transmits socialisation, memory and belonging, and this is exactly the persistence mechanism the continuity literature identifies. Then supply the test that earns the marks. A practice becomes obscurantist in its effect when a particular application blocks inquiry, blocks equal agency or blocks evidence-based choice, so the analysis attaches to the application and the mechanism, never to a community. Show the mechanism working through the vocabulary this owner owns. Sanskritisation demonstrates that ritual practice can be adopted to claim status within an unchanged hierarchy, which is precisely how a practice can be reproduced for reasons that have nothing to do with belief in its content; Westernisation demonstrates that contact with education, law and institutions introduces equality, individual rights and rationality as competing values; and modernisation demonstrates that rational-legal institutions and differentiated occupational roles change the structure in which the practice sits. Name the change mechanisms the directive expects. Formal education and codified law are the institutional channels through which structural modernisation is transmitted across generations, and internal dissent within a community is the mechanism that distinguishes reform from external imposition. Add the two-way cultural qualification so the answer is not a modernisation sermon. Universalisation carries local practice upward into pan-Indian recognition and parochialisation adapts pan-Indian practice to local form, so cultural change in India is negotiated rather than replaced, and reform that ignores this is usually rejected. Conclude that customs neither uniformly suppress reason nor are immune from it, that the defensible position is application-specific and evidence-led, and that no community may be characterised as inherently irrational in an answer of this kind.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 15-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise five points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For “PYQ DEMAND CARD 1 - 2020 GS-I Q19”, replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

PYQ DEMAND CARD 2 - 2021 GS-I Q19

Demand: Audited ledger demand rendering: cryptocurrency and its effect on global and Indian society. What is it and how does it affect society, 15 marks, 250 words.

Status: Recorded in the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger as cross-cutting. The instrument route terminates in the answer-complete Economy digital-economy owner while this owner is retained as the society-effect owner, so the answer is written only on the society layer. The locally held official 2021 paper is a scanned image without reliable English text extraction, so the ledger rendering is used and no verbatim wording is claimed.

Model solution: Declare the division of labour in the opening line, because this demand is failed by borrowing facts that this owner does not hold. The instrument's definition in technical and monetary terms, its regulatory position and any market data belong to the Economy digital-economy owner and to Science and Technology, and this answer therefore asserts no price, no legal status and no adoption figure. Establish the society-layer principle. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, which means the same instrument can widen capability for one group and concentrate risk on another. Work the four society channels in order. Access first: participation in any platform-mediated instrument is stratified by the digital divide across income, gender, region and generation, so an apparently open technology reaches the already better positioned first. Trust second: where an instrument is not intermediated by familiar institutions, social trust is transferred to informal networks and intermediaries, which changes who bears the cost of a failure. Work and identity third: platform-mediated activity reorganises occupational roles and self-description, which is the differentiation that modernisation as structural change describes. Unequal risk fourth: households with thin buffers absorb a loss differently from households with deep ones, so the same nominal exposure is not the same social exposure. Locate the whole discussion in the theory this owner owns. Diffusionist explanation accounts for how such an instrument spreads across societies, while modernisation accounts for the structural shift it interacts with, and neither licenses a claim that the technology itself causes a social outcome. Conclude that the honest society-layer verdict is conditional: the social effect follows access, regulation and use, and any stronger claim requires the instrument evidence that this owner deliberately does not hold.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on “PYQ DEMAND CARD 2 - 2021 GS-I Q19”, all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Declare the division of labour in the opening line, because this demand is failed by borrowing facts that this owner does not hold. The instrument's definition in technical and monetary terms, its regulatory position and any market data belong to the Economy digital-economy owner and to Science and Technology, and this answer therefore asserts no price, no legal status and no adoption figure. Establish the society-layer principle. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, which means the same instrument can widen capability for one group and concentrate risk on another. Work the four society channels in order. Access first: participation in any platform-mediated instrument is stratified by the digital divide across income, gender, region and generation, so an apparently open technology reaches the already better positioned first. Trust second: where an instrument is not intermediated by familiar institutions, social trust is transferred to informal networks and intermediaries, which changes who bears the cost of a failure. Work and identity third: platform-mediated activity reorganises occupational roles and self-description, which is the differentiation that modernisation as structural change describes. Unequal risk fourth: households with thin buffers absorb a loss differently from households with deep ones, so the same nominal exposure is not the same social exposure. Locate the whole discussion in the theory this owner owns. Diffusionist explanation accounts for how such an instrument spreads across societies, while modernisation accounts for the structural shift it interacts with, and neither licenses a claim that the technology itself causes a social outcome. Conclude that the honest society-layer verdict is conditional: the social effect follows access, regulation and use, and any stronger claim requires the instrument evidence that this owner deliberately does not hold.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Demand: Audited ledger demand rendering: cryptocurrency and its effect on global and Indian society. What is it and how does it affect society, 15 marks, 250 words. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Declare the division of labour in the opening line, because this demand is failed by borrowing facts that this owner does not hold. The instrument's definition in technical and monetary terms, its regulatory position and any market data belong to the Economy digital-economy owner and to Science and Technology, and this answer therefore asserts no price, no legal status and no adoption figure. Establish the society-layer principle. A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, which means the same instrument can widen capability for one group and concentrate risk on another. Work the four society channels in order. Access first: participation in any platform-mediated instrument is stratified by the digital divide across income, gender, region and generation, so an apparently open technology reaches the already better positioned first. Trust second: where an instrument is not intermediated by familiar institutions, social trust is transferred to informal networks and intermediaries, which changes who bears the cost of a failure. Work and identity third: platform-mediated activity reorganises occupational roles and self-description, which is the differentiation that modernisation as structural change describes. Unequal risk fourth: households with thin buffers absorb a loss differently from households with deep ones, so the same nominal exposure is not the same social exposure. Locate the whole discussion in the theory this owner owns. Diffusionist explanation accounts for how such an instrument spreads across societies, while modernisation accounts for the structural shift it interacts with, and neither licenses a claim that the technology itself causes a social outcome. Conclude that the honest society-layer verdict is conditional: the social effect follows access, regulation and use, and any stronger claim requires the instrument evidence that this owner deliberately does not hold.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 15-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise five points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For "PYQ DEMAND CARD 2 - 2021 GS-I Q19", replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

PYQ DEMAND CARD 3 - 2021 GS-I Q20

Demand: Audited ledger demand rendering: continuity of traditional social values amid social change. Enumerate, 15 marks, 250 words.

Status: Routed in the audited 2018-2023 Mains ledger to the Advanced owner, with the Core owner recording that Core routing supersedes. The locally held official 2021 paper is a scanned image without reliable English text extraction, so the ledger rendering is used and no verbatim wording is claimed.

Model solution: Treat the enumerate directive literally and give the examiner a numbered mechanism list, but pair each mechanism with the change pressure it is resisting, because a list of unchanged customs without that pairing is the standard low-scoring answer. Mechanism one is family and kin socialisation, which transmits value, obligation and role expectation across generations; the parallel pressure is migration and education, which move members out of daily supervision and into new normative environments. Mechanism two is ritual and festival life, which renews shared meaning at fixed intervals and keeps practice collective rather than private; the parallel pressure is media and market, which commercialise and standardise some of that practice. Mechanism three is language and regional culture, which carry idiom, memory and local identity; the parallel pressure is standardisation through schooling, administration and national media. Mechanism four is adaptation itself, described in this owner as universalisation, by which a local deity, festival or practice rises into pan-Indian recognition, and parochialisation, by which a pan-Indian textual practice is adapted, simplified or reinterpreted into local form; the parallel pressure is codified law, which converts some customary expectations into formal entitlement. Add the analytical point that lifts the list into an argument. Continuity in India is not the absence of change but a negotiated outcome, because the same institutions that transmit tradition are also the institutions through which Westernisation and modernisation arrive, and a group can accordingly modernise structurally through education and salaried employment while retaining ritual practice. Attach the theory qualification. Structural-functionalism reads this persistence as institutions renegotiating function, while conflict theory reads it as contested ground in which subordinate groups also use tradition to press claims, and the evidence in a given case decides between them. Conclude that traditional values persist because they are actively reproduced and adapted, so continuity and change are simultaneous rather than sequential.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on “PYQ DEMAND CARD 3 - 2021 GS-I Q20”, all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Treat the enumerate directive literally and give the examiner a numbered mechanism list, but pair each mechanism with the change pressure it is resisting, because a list of unchanged customs without that pairing is the standard low-scoring answer. Mechanism one is family and kin socialisation, which transmits value, obligation and role expectation across generations; the parallel pressure is migration and education, which move members out of daily supervision and into new normative environments. Mechanism two is ritual and festival life, which renews shared meaning at fixed intervals and keeps practice collective rather than private; the parallel pressure is media and market, which commercialise and standardise some of that practice. Mechanism three is language and regional culture, which carry idiom, memory and local identity; the parallel pressure is standardisation through schooling, administration and national media. Mechanism four is adaptation itself, described in this owner as universalisation, by which a local deity, festival or practice rises into pan-Indian recognition, and parochialisation, by which a pan-Indian textual practice is adapted, simplified or reinterpreted into local form; the parallel pressure is codified law, which converts some customary expectations into formal entitlement. Add the analytical point that lifts the list into an argument. Continuity in India is not the absence of change but a negotiated outcome, because the same institutions that transmit tradition are also the institutions through which Westernisation and modernisation arrive, and a group can accordingly modernise structurally through education and salaried employment while retaining ritual practice. Attach the theory qualification. Structural-functionalism reads this persistence as institutions renegotiating function, while conflict theory reads it as contested ground in which subordinate groups also use tradition to press claims, and the evidence in a given case decides between them. Conclude that traditional values persist because they are actively reproduced and adapted, so continuity and change are simultaneous rather than sequential.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Demand: Audited ledger demand rendering: continuity of traditional social values amid social change. Enumerate, 15 marks, 250 words. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Treat the enumerate directive literally and give the examiner a numbered mechanism list, but pair each mechanism with the change pressure it is resisting, because a list of unchanged customs without that pairing is the standard low-scoring answer. Mechanism one is family and kin socialisation, which transmits value, obligation and role expectation across generations; the parallel pressure is migration and education, which move members out of daily supervision and into new normative environments. Mechanism two is ritual and festival life, which renews shared meaning at fixed intervals and keeps practice collective rather than private; the parallel pressure is media and market, which commercialise and standardise some of that practice. Mechanism three is language and regional culture, which carry idiom, memory and local identity; the parallel pressure is standardisation through schooling, administration and national media. Mechanism four is adaptation itself, described in this owner as universalisation, by which a local deity, festival or practice rises into pan-Indian recognition, and parochialisation, by which a pan-Indian textual practice is adapted, simplified or reinterpreted into local form; the parallel pressure is codified law, which converts some customary expectations into formal entitlement. Add the analytical point that lifts the list into an argument. Continuity in India is not the absence of change but a negotiated outcome, because the same institutions that transmit tradition are also the institutions through which Westernisation and modernisation arrive, and a group can accordingly modernise structurally through education and salaried employment while retaining ritual practice. Attach the theory qualification. Structural-functionalism reads this persistence as institutions renegotiating function, while conflict theory reads it as contested ground in which subordinate groups also use tradition to press claims, and the evidence in a given case decides between them. Conclude that traditional values persist because they are actively reproduced and adapted, so continuity and change are simultaneous rather than sequential.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 15-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise five points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For "PYQ DEMAND CARD 3 - 2021 GS-I Q20", replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

PYQ DEMAND CARD 4 - 2025 GS-I Q18

Demand: How do you account for the growing fast food industries given that there are increased health concerns in modern society? Illustrate your answer with the Indian experience. (Answer in 250 words) 15 marks.

Status: Wording confirmed in the locally held official 2025 General Studies Paper-I. Routed in the audited 2024-2025 Mains ledger to this Basic owner. The Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims this demand, and that cross-owner conflict is stated openly here rather than resolved by assertion.

Model solution: Name the paradox exactly before explaining it, because the demand supplies the tension and expects it to be taken seriously rather than dissolved: health concern is genuinely rising and the fast-food industry is genuinely growing, and an answer that denies either half has not begun. Account for the growth through mechanisms rather than through a single cause. The first mechanism is time. Dual-income urban households face real constraints on home cooking, so convenience acquires a practical value that has nothing to do with a view about nutrition. The second mechanism is price and delivery. Platform logistics lower the effective cost of convenience and extend it beyond the household's immediate neighbourhood, which converts an occasional choice into a routine one. The third mechanism is aspiration. Branded consumption operates as a marker of urban modern identity, and this is cultural consumerism, the symbolic status meaning attached to consumption, working independently of the structural expansion of purchasing capacity. The fourth mechanism is adaptation. Glocalisation, the adaptation of global products to local tastes and norms, lowers the cultural barrier to adoption through locally customised menus, which widens the addressable market beyond what an unmodified global menu could reach. Illustrate with the Indian experience honestly. The Indian case is not only a story about global chains, because domestic chains and food-delivery ecosystems carry much of the growth, so attributing the whole trend to globalisation misreads the market. Offer one behavioural lens and bound it. Bounded rationality explains how convenience, present-oriented choice and status motives can outweigh long-run health considerations in an actual purchase, but it is a lens rather than proof that one motive dominates every purchase. Conclude that the paradox is a structural trade-off between time-poverty-driven convenience and long-run public-health outcomes, not an awareness gap that better messaging alone would close, and quote no consumption or market figure that this owner does not hold.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on “PYQ DEMAND CARD 4 - 2025 GS-I Q18”, all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Name the paradox exactly before explaining it, because the demand supplies the tension and expects it to be taken seriously rather than dissolved: health concern is genuinely rising and the fast-food industry is genuinely growing, and an answer that denies either half has not begun. Account for the growth through mechanisms rather than through a single cause. The first mechanism is time. Dual-income urban households face real constraints on home cooking, so convenience acquires a practical value that has nothing to do with a view about nutrition. The second mechanism is price and delivery. Platform logistics lower the effective cost of convenience and extend it beyond the household's immediate neighbourhood, which converts an occasional choice into a routine one. The third mechanism is aspiration. Branded consumption operates as a marker of urban modern identity, and this is cultural consumerism, the symbolic status meaning attached to consumption, working independently of the structural expansion of purchasing capacity. The fourth mechanism is adaptation. Glocalisation, the adaptation of global products to local tastes and norms, lowers the cultural barrier to adoption through locally customised menus, which widens the addressable market beyond what an unmodified global menu could reach. Illustrate with the Indian experience honestly. The Indian case is not only a story about global chains, because domestic chains and food-delivery ecosystems carry much of the growth, so attributing the whole trend to globalisation misreads the market. Offer one behavioural lens and bound it. Bounded rationality explains how convenience, present-oriented choice and status motives can outweigh long-run health considerations in an actual purchase, but it is a lens rather than proof that one motive dominates every purchase. Conclude that the paradox is a structural trade-off between time-poverty-driven convenience and long-run public-health outcomes, not an awareness gap that better messaging alone would close, and quote no consumption or market figure that this owner does not hold.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Demand: How do you account for the growing fast food industries given that there are increased health concerns in modern society? Illustrate your answer with the Indian experience. (Answer in 250 words) 15 marks. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Name the paradox exactly before explaining it, because the demand supplies the tension and expects it to be taken seriously rather than dissolved: health concern is genuinely rising and the fast-food industry is genuinely growing, and an answer that denies either half has not begun. Account for the growth through mechanisms rather than through a single cause. The first mechanism is time. Dual-income urban households face real constraints on home cooking, so convenience acquires a practical value that has nothing to do with a view about nutrition. The second mechanism is price and delivery. Platform logistics lower the effective cost of convenience and extend it beyond the household's immediate neighbourhood, which converts an occasional choice into a routine one. The third mechanism is aspiration. Branded consumption operates as a marker of urban modern identity, and this is cultural consumerism, the symbolic status meaning attached to consumption, working independently of the structural expansion of purchasing capacity. The fourth mechanism is adaptation. Glocalisation, the adaptation of global products to local tastes and norms, lowers the cultural barrier to adoption through locally customised menus, which widens the addressable market beyond what an unmodified global menu could reach. Illustrate with the Indian experience honestly. The Indian case is not only a story about global chains, because domestic chains and food-delivery ecosystems carry much of the growth, so attributing the whole trend to globalisation misreads the market. Offer one behavioural lens and bound it. Bounded rationality explains how convenience, present-oriented choice and status motives can outweigh long-run health considerations in an actual purchase, but it is a lens rather than proof that one motive dominates every purchase. Conclude that the paradox is a structural trade-off between time-poverty-driven convenience and long-run public-health outcomes, not an awareness gap that better messaging alone would close, and quote no consumption or market figure that this owner does not hold.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 15-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise five points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For “PYQ DEMAND CARD 4 - 2025 GS-I Q18”, replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

ORIGINAL MAINS 1 - 10 MARKS

Question: Distinguish Sanskritisation, Westernisation and modernisation as three axes of social change. Answer in about 150 words.

Model thesis: The three concepts move on the separate axes of status, values and structure, so they can advance at different speeds inside the same community and may never be arranged as stages of one ladder.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic.
- Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy.
- Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community.
- Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error.

Qualified conclusion: The three concepts move on the separate axes of status, values and structure, so they can advance at different speeds inside the same community and may never be arranged as stages of one ladder.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on “Distinguish Sanskritisation, Westernisation and modernisation as three axes of social change...”, all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: The three concepts move on the separate axes of status, values and structure, so they can advance at different speeds inside the same community and may never be arranged as stages of one ladder.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Sanskritisation, in M. N. Srinivas's formulation, is the emulation of a locally dominant caste's ritual practice by another jati in order to claim higher local status, and it changes a group's position within the hierarchy without altering the hierarchy's own logic. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
2. Claim and named evidence: Westernisation is the adoption of new values from contact with Western education, law and institutions, including equality, individual rights and rationality, and unlike Sanskritisation it can subvert rather than merely reposition a group within the existing hierarchy. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

3. Claim and named evidence: Modernisation is structural change toward rational-legal institutions, technology and differentiated occupational roles, and it is analytically distinct from both Sanskritisation and Westernisation even though all three often occur together in one community. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

4. Claim and named evidence: Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: The three concepts move on the separate axes of status, values and structure, so they can advance at different speeds inside the same community and may never be arranged as stages of one ladder.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 10-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise three points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For “Distinguish Sanskritisation, Westernisation and modernisation as three axes of social change....”, replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

ORIGINAL MAINS 2 - 10 MARKS

Question: Distinguish secularisation as a sociological process from secularism as a constitutional doctrine. Answer in about 150 words.

Model thesis: Secularisation is an institutional description that can coexist with intense religious identity while secularism is a normative doctrine about the state, and only the first belongs to a society answer.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism.
- Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error.
- This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity.

Qualified conclusion: Secularisation is an institutional description that can coexist with intense religious identity while secularism is a normative doctrine about the state, and only the first belongs to a society answer.

Demand decoding: The directive answer requires a direct position on “Distinguish secularisation as a sociological process from secularism as a constitutional...”, all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Secularisation is an institutional description that can coexist with intense religious identity while secularism is a normative doctrine about the state, and only the first belongs to a society answer.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Secularisation describes the differentiation of religious authority from economic, political and other institutions, sometimes accompanied by declining religious control in particular domains, and it is neither a universal linear disappearance of religion nor the constitutional doctrine of secularism. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
2. Claim and named evidence: Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
3. Claim and named evidence: This answer treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Secularisation is an institutional description that can coexist with intense religious identity while secularism is a normative doctrine about the state, and only the first belongs to a society answer.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 10-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise three points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For “Distinguish secularisation as a sociological process from secularism as a constitutional...”, replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

ORIGINAL MAINS 3 - 15 MARKS

Question: Examine the claim that structural-functional and conflict readings of the same social change are interchangeable. Answer in about 250 words.

Model thesis: The two lenses attribute the same outcome to different mechanisms, so an answer earns its marks by naming which mechanism the evidence supports rather than by reciting both and choosing neither.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led.

- Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode.
- The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies.
- Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form.

Qualified conclusion: The two lenses attribute the same outcome to different mechanisms, so an answer earns its marks by naming which mechanism the evidence supports rather than by reciting both and choosing neither.

Demand decoding: The directive examine requires a direct position on “Examine the claim that structural-functional and conflict readings of the same social change...”, all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: The two lenses attribute the same outcome to different mechanisms, so an answer earns its marks by naming which mechanism the evidence supports rather than by reciting both and choosing neither.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Structural-functionalism views society as an interconnected system of institutions whose adaptations can restore or renegotiate equilibrium after disruption, and it is one analytical lens rather than a claim that all change is smooth or consensus-led. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
2. Claim and named evidence: Conflict theory, Marxian in influence, views social change as arising from structural contradictions and struggle between groups with opposed interests rather than from consensus-seeking adaptation, and it offers a genuinely different causal account of the same episode. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
3. Claim and named evidence: The ending of an untouchability practice in a village can be read functionally as a system reducing disruptive tension and through conflict theory as the outcome of sustained lower-caste mobilisation, so a strong answer states which mechanism the available evidence better supports instead of asserting that only one theory ever applies. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
4. Claim and named evidence: Evolutionary theory explains change as internally generated unilinear development while cyclical theory describes civilisational rise and fall, and modern sociology generally prefers multi-linear, context-specific accounts to either pure form. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: The two lenses attribute the same outcome to different mechanisms, so an answer earns its marks by naming which mechanism the evidence supports rather than by reciting both and choosing neither.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 15-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise five points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For “Examine the claim that structural-functional and conflict readings of the same social change...”, replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

ORIGINAL MAINS 4 - 15 MARKS

Question: Examine the Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework as an account of two-way cultural change in India. Answer in about 250 words.

Model thesis: Universalisation and parochialisation run in opposite directions, which is why the framework refutes a purely top-down diffusion model of Indian cultural change.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation.
- Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk.
- Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange.
- A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts.

Qualified conclusion: Universalisation and parochialisation run in opposite directions, which is why the framework refutes a purely top-down diffusion model of Indian cultural change.

Demand decoding: The directive examine requires a direct position on “Examine the Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework as an account of two-way cultural...”, all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Universalisation and parochialisation run in opposite directions, which is why the framework refutes a purely top-down diffusion model of Indian cultural change.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Robert Redfield's Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework, developed for Indian village society by McKim Marriott, distinguishes the pan-Indian, textual and reflective cultural stream from the local, oral and folk stream, and the two interact continuously rather than existing in isolation. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
2. Claim and named evidence: Universalisation is the movement of a local folk deity, festival or practice upward into pan-Indian recognition through pilgrimage networks, textual incorporation or patronage, and it demonstrates that cultural flow in India is not only downward from elite to folk. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

3. Claim and named evidence: Parochialisation is the adaptation, simplification or reinterpretation of a pan-Indian textual practice into local folk form to fit regional resources, language and social structure, and together with universalisation it makes Indian cultural change a genuine two-way exchange. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

4. Claim and named evidence: A diffusionist explanation attributes change to the spread of practices, technology or ideas from one society or region to another, which is how Western-origin institutions are usually said to have entered Indian society, and it complements rather than replaces internal-development accounts. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Universalisation and parochialisation run in opposite directions, which is why the framework refutes a purely top-down diffusion model of Indian cultural change.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 15-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise five points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For “Examine the Great Tradition and Little Tradition framework as an account of two-way cultural...”, replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

ORIGINAL MAINS 5 - 20 MARKS

Question: Assess the mechanisms through which traditional values persist while Indian society changes. Answer in about 300 words.

Model thesis: Persistence is produced by identifiable mechanisms of socialisation, ritual, language and adaptation, each of which meets a named change pressure, so continuity is an active process rather than the absence of change.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law.
- Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change.
- Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error.
- A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational.

Qualified conclusion: Persistence is produced by identifiable mechanisms of socialisation, ritual, language and adaptation, each of which meets a named change pressure, so continuity is an active process rather than the absence of change.

Demand decoding: The directive assess requires a direct position on “Assess the mechanisms through which traditional values persist while Indian society changes...”, all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: Persistence is produced by identifiable mechanisms of socialisation, ritual, language and adaptation, each of which meets a named change pressure, so continuity is an active process rather than the absence of change.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: Traditional values persist through family and kin socialisation, ritual and festival life, language and regional culture, and adaptation through universalisation and parochialisation, and each of these mechanisms operates against a parallel change pressure from education, migration, media and law. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
2. Claim and named evidence: Where Westernisation and modernisation advance while local ritual-status recognition lags, a group can hold new values and a new structural position without matching status, and that inconsistency itself generates further pressure for social change. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
3. Claim and named evidence: Sanskritisation operates on status, Westernisation on values and modernisation on structure, so a group can modernise structurally through formal education and salaried employment without Sanskritising ritually, and treating the three as points on a single scale of progress is the standard error. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
4. Claim and named evidence: A custom is not automatically irrational, so the examinable question is when a particular application of a practice blocks inquiry, equal agency or evidence-based choice, and the answer must name reform, education and internal dissent as change mechanisms without describing any community as inherently irrational. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: Persistence is produced by identifiable mechanisms of socialisation, ritual, language and adaptation, each of which meets a named change pressure, so continuity is an active process rather than the absence of change.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 20-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise six to eight points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For “Assess the mechanisms through which traditional values persist while Indian society changes...”, replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.

ORIGINAL MAINS 6 - 20 MARKS

Question: Assess how a society answer should analyse a new technology's social effect without borrowing another owner's facts. Answer in about 300 words.

Model thesis: The society layer of access, trust, work, identity and unequal risk is fully answerable without asserting a price, a legal status or an adoption figure, and stating that boundary is itself part of the answer's quality.

Claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification:

- A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology.
- This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity.
- Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion.
- Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error.

Qualified conclusion: The society layer of access, trust, work, identity and unequal risk is fully answerable without asserting a price, a legal status or an adoption figure, and stating that boundary is itself part of the answer's quality.

Demand decoding: The directive assess requires a direct position on "Assess how a society answer should analyse a new technology's social effect without borrowing...", all clauses, a sociological mechanism, historical trajectory, intersectional and regional variation, named Indian evidence, constitutional/institutional boundaries and a qualified conclusion.

Detailed examiner-grade model answer:

Introduction and thesis: The society layer of access, trust, work, identity and unequal risk is fully answerable without asserting a price, a legal status or an adoption figure, and stating that boundary is itself part of the answer's quality.

Analytical body:

1. Claim and named evidence: A technology's societal effect depends on access, regulation, use and unequal risk rather than on the technology's label, so a cryptocurrency or platform demand is answered on the society layer of access, trust, work, identity and risk while the instrument's macroeconomic and technical facts are cross-linked to Economy and to Science and Technology. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
2. Claim and named evidence: This owner treats social change as a question answered with several complementary lenses rather than one master theory, combining evolutionary, cyclical, structural-functional and conflict accounts with an India-specific vocabulary, while socio-religious reform chronology remains with Modern Indian History and constitutional secularism remains with Polity. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.
3. Claim and named evidence: Four General Studies Paper-I demands are routed to this topic, with the 2020 obscurantism demand, the 2021 traditional-values demand and the society half of the 2021 cryptocurrency demand routed in the audited 2018-2023 ledger to the Advanced owner, and the 2025 fast-food demand routed in the audited 2024-2025 ledger to this Basic owner even though the Globalisation owner's own answer-architecture table also claims it, and that conflict is recorded openly rather than resolved by assertion. Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

4. Claim and named evidence: Secularisation operates at the institutional level, secularism at the legal and political level as state neutrality toward religion, and desacralisation at the experiential level as a declining sense of the sacred in particular practices or spaces, and conflating any two of the three is a frequent Mains error.

Analysis: Connect structure or institution -> norm/incentive/power/agency mechanism -> differentiated social outcome -> feedback or policy implication. Qualification: State internal group variation, regional/historical scope, correlation-versus-causation or legal-norm-versus-lived-outcome boundary.

Counter-position / limit: Neither a constitutional provision, one scheme, aggregate correlation nor a single community example establishes uniform implementation, causation or national experience; test institutions, power, agency, intersectionality, region, period and evidence status.

Qualified conclusion: The society layer of access, trust, work, identity and unequal risk is fully answerable without asserting a price, a legal status or an adoption figure, and stating that boundary is itself part of the answer's quality.

Executable exam-length answer / compression plan: For a 20-mark answer, spend about one-sixth of the time decoding the directive and drawing the mechanism; define and state a thesis; organise six to eight points as claim -> named evidence -> analysis -> qualification; compress examples before mechanisms and reserve the final minute for causation, group variation and legal-outcome limits.

Why this earns marks: The answer obeys the directive, explains rather than lists, integrates India-centric evidence and avoids homogenisation, legalism and causal overclaim.

How to improve this answer: For "Assess how a society answer should analyse a new technology's social effect without borrowing...", replace the weakest generalisation with one named community, region, institution, movement or source-dated dataset and state what that evidence cannot establish.