STATIC THEORY

- The office's independence is designed to be thin — no fixed term, no removal procedure, and permission to keep a private practice — so its neutrality depends on convention rather than on constitutional protection.

- The AG is powerful in audience but limited in autonomy: he may be heard in every court and both Houses, yet he serves at pleasure and may never argue against the government he advises.

- Only the Attorney-General and the Advocate-General are constitutional law officers; the Solicitor General's prominence is a matter of executive practice, not of constitutional status.

- The Attorney-General's duties are enumerated, not open-ended: Article 76 confines him to advising on matters the President refers and to representing the Union in the courts, which is why he is the government's adviser and advocate rather than an independent prosecutor.

Constitutional map: Article 76 creates the Attorney General for India; Article 165 creates an Advocate General for each State. The Solicitor General and Additional Solicitors General are executive law offices under Union rules, not constitutional offices. Current Attorney General: the official 2025 Gazette reappointed Senior Advocate R. Venkataramani for two years with effect from 1 October 2025. This dated appointment does not create a constitutional fixed-term rule. Advocate-General incumbents remain State-specific and must be sourced State by State. Appointment and qualification: the President appoints a person qualified to be a Supreme Court judge as Attorney General; the Governor appoints a person qualified to be a High Court judge as Advocate General. Tenure and remuneration: both offices are held during the pleasure of the relevant constitutional head; neither Article fixes a term or removal procedure. Remuneration is determined by the President or Governor. Functions and rights: the Attorney General advises the Government of India on referred legal matters, performs assigned constitutional/statutory functions and has a constitutional right of audience in all courts. Articles 88 and 105(4) permit parliamentary participation and privileges without a vote. Articles 177 and 194(4) provide the State-legislature analogue. Advocate-General limit: Article 165 contains no counterpart to Article 76(3)'s express all-India right of audience; court appearance therefore depends on applicable procedural and professional law. Current rules: the Law Officers (Conditions of Service) Rules, 1987 govern the Union law officers. The Gazette-notified 2026 amendment changes Rule 7 fee/retainer provisions; it does not constitutionalise the SG/ASGs or give the Attorney General tenure security. Professional limits: the Attorney General is not a whole-time government servant and may practise privately subject to the rules, including conflict, adverse-brief, criminal-defence and directorship restrictions and permissions. Enforcement boundary: the section 15 Contempt of Courts Act consent role concerns specified private criminal-contempt motions; courts retain suo motu power. The law officer advises and represents, but does not adjudicate. PYQ firewall: the verified 2019 and 2025 Attorney-General demands are owned here; wider executive accountability and court procedure remain with their respective owners.
