Core distinction: a constitution constitutes public power, distributes it, protects rights and states governing purposes. Constitutionalism requires that this power actually remain limited, accountable and governed by law. Legal hierarchy: Constitution, constitutional law, ordinary law and convention are related but distinct. Indian ordinary law and every constituted organ derive competence from the supreme Constitution. Classification: enacted/evolved, codified/uncodified, rigid/flexible, federal/unitary and procedural/prescriptive are separate analytical axes. India combines rigidity and flexibility, federal and centralising features, and procedural with transformative commitments. Constituent power: Article 368 confers constituted amending power, not unlimited original sovereignty. Kesavananda Bharati permits wide amendment but forbids destruction of basic structure; Minerva Mills protects limited amending power, review and rights-DPSP balance. Basic-structure control: Indira Nehru Gandhi, Waman Rao and I.R. Coelho apply the doctrine to democracy, rule of law, judicial review and post- Kesavananda Ninth Schedule protection. The doctrine is judicially developed, not a separately enumerated constitutional article. Constitutional morality: Government of NCT of Delhi and Navtej Singh Johar connect fidelity to constitutional roles, accountability, equality and minority citizenship. The doctrine is not a judge's personal morality or a substitute for text, competence and reasons. Transformative/living interpretation: Maneka Gandhi, Puttaswamy, Navtej and Joseph Shine apply enduring liberty, dignity and equality to entrenched hierarchy and new conditions. Living interpretation is bounded by text, structure, precedent, institutional role and legitimate remedy. Failure and resilience: emergency experience, S.R. Bommai federal/ secular review and separation/checks show that elections alone do not prove constitutionalism. Remedies, institutions, conventions and public reason convert text into constitutional government. Current text control, checked 5 September 2026: the Legislative Department's official English text remains updated through the Constitution (One Hundred and Sixth Amendment) Act, 2023 (106th Amendment). Basic structure and constitutional morality remain judicial doctrines; no pending political claim or proposal is represented as enacted constitutional meaning. PYQ firewall: broad historical, salient-feature, Preamble, amendment, rights and federal questions remain with their owners. This topic owns the higher-order concept, constitutionalism test and bounded interpretive lenses.

GS-II Indian Polity

INTRO & ORIGIN

Constituent power creates or fundamentally reconstitutes the constitutional order. Constituted powers are the legislature, executive, judiciary and other institutions created by that order.

Advanced learning layer: concepts → constitutional detail → UPSC application.

STATIC THEORY

- The distinction prevents a constituted institution from treating its conferred authority as unlimited. In India, Parliament's Article 368 power is extraordinary but still a constituted power under the Constitution. The basic-structure doctrine therefore controls amendment without claiming that courts possess an unlimited constituent power of their own.
